Dedicated

GREETING

O thou the lofty, thou the strong,
Brigh'st wrestler of this tith of years.
Sent from our hand through hopes and fears
To hurl the darkness and the wrong

Yet lower from the light,—we greet
Here on the threshold of a tith
More boon yet, yet more bright and blithe
With promise, thee, and at thy feet,

Lay this last noble page of strife,
The record of one more year's toil,
The prelude of ten more years' toil,
The paeon of thy stalwart life.

THROUGH the University Extension Division the University attempts to bring, as far as possible, its many advantages for culture and instruction to people who are prevented from going to the University itself. It makes its appeal not alone to those whose educational advantages have been limited, but to every individual who wishes to establish or renew relations with the currents of thought and aspiration which flow into, through and out from, the University. The value of the work is attested by the gradual growth of the respective departments of the Division.

Under the auspices of the Lecture-Study Department, centres for the extension of University Teaching are organized and in these centres courses of lectures and instruction are given by members of the University faculty. During the school year 1901-02, 190 courses of six lectures each were delivered in 140 different centres. Reports for the corresponding period of the current year show an increase of about 20 per cent over the above figures. During the six months closing April 1st, 1903, there have been nine members of the University faculty devoting their entire time to instruction by this method and fifteen others have devoted a portion of the time during each quarter to University Extension Lecturing.

Through the Correspondence-Study Department any one anywhere may take the courses of instruction which are given in the University class-rooms and secure credit toward the degree. In addition to these courses of a college and graduate grade, many of an elementary character are offered so that one may prepare for, as well as continue, a college course. Each year has witnessed a larger enrolment in this Department. The enrolment for 1902-03 has been about 20 per cent greater than that of the preceding year. Approximately 90 per cent of the students are teachers in different parts of this country, although many vocations and every quarter of the globe are represented. While the majority do not take these courses for credit purposes, the number of those who have been in residence and who are working toward the degree has been rapidly increasing. This is due in some measure, no doubt, to the fact that the University now allows a student to take the examination on a correspondence course immediately after finishing it, at his home, under approved supervision.

Those who knew Charles Lindsay Burroughs, the shock of his death remains unsoftened by time. His memory remains among us with a personality, as if the living man had left us for an instant, and would in an instant more return, with all his odd bluntness of manner, his quick, nervous speech, his unfailing, obvious, manly earnestness and friendliness. "He was good," said a man who had known him well. There were two or three in a little group, coming away from the memorial service held in the winter quarter. "And it wasn't the kind of goodness that means feebleness, either."

"No," said some one else, "there never was anything undecided about Charlie Burroughs. He knew what he wanted, and he wanted it hard."

As an athlete, he never entered a race without the intense purpose of winning if he could. Unfairness he resented immediately. He knew that he would take no advantage, and he did not mean to give any. As a scholar, he was enthusiastic and keen. No pains were too great to take, if he might win to his end through them. Yet his scholarship was sympathetic, too. He was not the sort of man to spend his time looking for flaws in the work of others.

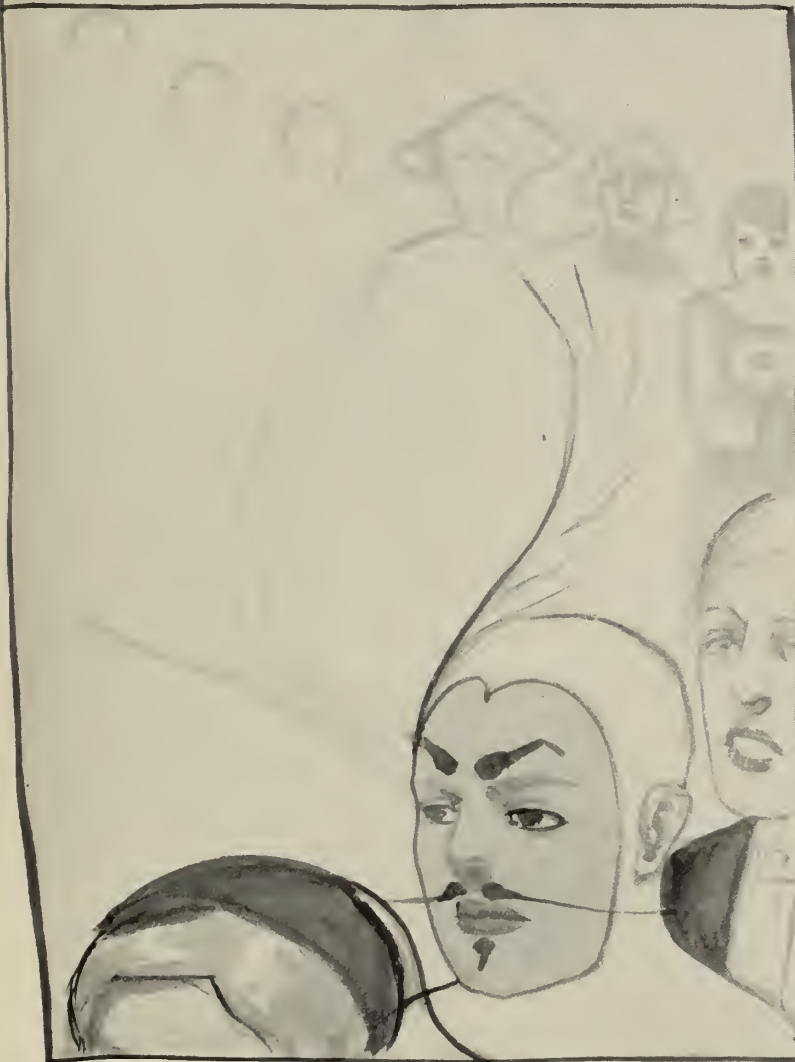

Respect is a splendid tribute to secure from the world. No man despises it, though some affect to. But respect, after all, is cold without friendliness and affection. It is not as an athlete, not as a scholar, not as a doer, that we miss Charlie Burroughs, for there are other scholars, and athletes and workers who will fill his place. But his place as a friend, who can fill? Who can give us the sanity, the independent honesty, the common-sense, and with these the loyalty, the spirit of sacrifice and kindness, the dreamy tolerance, which made up the comradeship of the man who is gone? It is for these we miss him more and more. He was a good friend; as he grew older, he would have grown a better friend. Is it a wonder that the voice sinks and hesitates to frame the last "Good-bye?"

History of Class of 1903

IN the fall of 1899, as in many other autumn quarters, some hundreds of reluctant, indifferent and complacent Freshmen entered the University of Chicago. They felt no particular interest in the place, for they had no particular reason to do so. But behold the change! The end of the quarter saw these same Freshmen, howling enthusiasts to a man, congratulate each other lustily on their Alma Mater. Football did it. The spectacularly successful season of '99 had its due effect in starting unconscious '03 in that career of loyalty to the University in which it has since waxed strong.

Many more things contributed to the inception and development of the devotion, not to class alone but to the 'Varsity itself. To the Class of '03 was given the rare privilege, probably not to be enjoyed in the next decade, of seeing a serene and unploughed Campus. In those halcyon days, it was prosaically safe to hurry to and from classes, or to stroll about in the pleasant but demoralizing Spring time.

Not being distracted by a corner-stone here, a new walk or a yawning tunnel there, or a bit of landscape gardening somewhere else, we were able to spare some otherwise anxious moments in forming acquaintances, and interest in each other, which in four years pleasant passing, have expanded into friendship and appreciation.

This bit of history may not degenerate into mere chronicle lest glory of '03 and list of innumerable great deeds well done grow into immodest proportions. But some facts must be mentioned, significant of the place of the Class in the University life. Chief among them is the successful organization of '03 in its Sophomore year. This was the first class which founded itself while yet in Junior college. Side by side with this, is the yet more significant fact of the unprecedented proportion of the Freshman class, which still stands with '03, in Senior year. Early organization from an inchoate mass into an unified body led to its inevitable outcome,—greater college spirit and the faint beginnings of class spirit. Results are constantly seen in the success with which later organization has been effected; in the ease with which elections are managed; in the general interest in everything pertaining to '03.

The class has always supported with enthusiasm our small hoard of traditions. It has indulged in inter-class contests in which, incidentally, it has always been more magnanimous than glorious. It has initiated Freshmen into the 'Varsity life through the lamented Freshman conventions. It has frolicked through Senior-day games and it has sentimentalized over the ivy planting. It has looked in at past Senior exercises with patronizing approval and will soon, with a pleasurable sorrow, say its own farewell. In short, it has done all the things that a good class should do, and is pleased with a modest consciousness of virtue. For its stars of varying magnitudes have shone in literary heavens; in "Weekly"—general and segregated editions; in "Cap and Gown;" in "Monthly;" it has sparkled in athletics, and in society its light has not been hid. Business and domestic spheres have been illumined by its members, who, though departed, are followed by '03 with friendly solicitude. They are claimed by the bonds of early sympathy and the common pains of the intricacies of first registration.

No chronicle of events seems necessary to this class history. Each has his thousand memories, and should memory fail, the "Cap and Gown" lies ready to the hand. Should these tentative notes rouse in a stranger's mind a natural interest in '03, it is but necessary to turn these pages to find our faces and our deeds disclosed, a fair and an impartial record of an unblemished career.

History of the Class of 1904

STRANGE as it may seem, the proud and noble Class of 1904, which now occupies the envied position of "The Juniors," entered the University one bright October morning in the early part of the present century as mere Freshmen. Although fresh as the average, we were nevertheless ambitious; and as ambition is the greater part of success, we were bound to make a name for ourselves. We immediately began to get together and tell one another how good we were, the class of naughty-three to the contrary notwithstanding (as they say in books).

In order to make the Class feel its importance, we decided to organize. So we met in chapel one morning, and elected the following officers, who were to hold down their positions until the good old summer time: Samuel F. Fellows, President; Bertha Iles, Vice President; E. J. Downey, Secretary;

Frank R. Adams, Treasurer, and L. A. Hopkins, Sergeant-at-Arms. We would have elected half a dozen more to perform the arduous duties of class management, but the bell rang, and we all rushed off to our eleven o'clocks. It is plain that we had not then learned the joys of cutting, or we would not have gone to class at all after having completed such a momentous action as that of organizing.

We all felt so buoyant and "what-the- — -do-we-care-ish" that under the leadership of Cliff Gaylord, Stanley Rich and L. A. Hopkins, we hung a maroon banner, bearing the defiant numerals "04," to the flag pole where it continued to flout the sky for fifteen hours, just to let the Sophomores know that we were around. In the course of time a crowd of unaesthetic '03 men tore the flag down, and after a friendly bout with our class succeeded in getting away with their lives—and incidentally with the banner.

Our revenge was not long in coming, however. Soon after the rally round the flag we sent a polite little note to the Class of '03, telling them that if they would climb into eleven football suits and stroll out into the "Campus Martius" we would be delighted to give them a few practical lessons in football as she is played. In a moment of boldness the Sophomores accepted our invitation, with the result that we not only made them bite the dust, but by using our Captain Backhous as a battering-ram, actually succeeded in pulverizing an amazing number of our opponents' line men. The game ended in a decisive victory for '04 by showing '03 the small end of a 6-0 score. This should have been sufficient to squelch the arrogant Sophomores, but the Sophomores refused to be squelched and continued to plot darkly for a means of downing us.

They gave us a Freshman Presentation which we all enjoyed immensely—principally because the clever and witty attempts on our foes' part to show us our proper place were so skillfully turned back upon them by the '04 champion, Milton Sills. The Presentation ended up in a free for all fight on the Campus, in which "everybody had a good time and a very pleasant evening was had," with the possible exception of the unfortunate ones who mussed their clothes in such a way that "tell one another how good we were"

"with distain"

bruised but happy.

they were no good afterwards. The fight, of course, was segregated, but the Presentation was not.

We had hoped to close our first year of University life in a blaze of glory, but it was not to be. The 1903 relay team did their little best, and succeeded in running away from our men in the race in the Spring of 1901. This was the first time that '04 was ever made to see the possibility of another class being as good in any line as we were. Shortly after this defeat college closed for the vacation, and we all flocked out to our summer pleasures, feeling justly proud of ourselves—simply because we were men and women from the best in the west, the University of Chicago.

When we returned in the Fall we were different than a year previously. It was '04 who had become the arrogant Sophomores to replace '03 who had moved up a step. And we found a new class of men and women who were just as fresh and ambitious as we had been but a year since. Such a spirit seemed presumptuous now to us, and we determined to look upon it with disdain. But as we wanted to act disdainful as a body, we reorganized and elected a new group of officers with this result: H. W. Ford, President; Walter Johnson, Vice President; Marie McAvooy, Secretary-Treasurer, and W. Carey, Sergeant-at-Arms.

Early in October three enterprising Freshmen—Jennison, Speik and Magee—determined to let us know that they had arrived and were thirsting for a fight. On Hallowe'en they climbed to the top of the new power house chimney and dropped their flag to the most inaccessible and at the same time most conspicuous part of the structure, to wave defiance to the class of '04. The next morning occurred the most memorable rush of the University's short but troublous history. Indeed, ferocity and hard feeling reigned supreme. Three of our men, after much delay, succeeded in gaining the top of the chimney and dislodging the "fight provoker." '04 withstood '05 at entrance with a display of true Chicago spirit. The enemy rushed our position repeatedly with but scant effect, and few casualties. (No lives lost.) During the excitement the Sophomores above, by employing true Napoleonic tactics, managed to escape with the spoils unmolested. The fight was then transferred to the walk in front of Cobb, where the '05's found us invincible, and soon retreated, leaving us in proud possession of the victory. No one was seriously injured in the battle, beyond the painful infliction of a most unfortunate number of cuts (!)

Several weeks after this we again humbled the neophytes on the gridiron, and crushed them with the overwhelming defeat of 27-5. Captain Louer led the music for '04 at this delightful occasion.

Our next set-to with the new students came in March when the '05 track team showed us what they had in them. We suffered a bad defeat here, and looked on meekly while our opponents trotted gaily off with decisive victory. Even the doughty Hopkins, our track captain, could not stem the tide of defeat.

Although we couldn't run, we soon showed the Freshmen that we were able to stand and fight by displaying our prowess in debate soon after. Arthur E. Lord, H. P. Miller, and H. W. Ford composed the '04 debating team that won from the Freshmen. It has been said that after Miller had finished talking one of his opponents found that his right arm was utterly useless.

Our last conflict with the Freshmen occurred late in the Spring. It took the form of a series of baseball games, only two of which were played off because of inability to arrange dates.

With the end of our Sophomore year came the close of our career as a fighting class, and in the following Fall Naught-four, having entered upon its Junior year, began to look upon University life with a more serious feeling, and became imbued with the true college spirit as opposed to class spirit.

1905 Class History

THE Class of 1905 was organized early in October, 1901, with the following officers: Clark Jennison, President; Frink Lovell, Vice President; Fred A. Speik, Treasurer; Miss Ruth Reddy, Secretary. Early in its Freshman year the class showed that it was going to make its mark in the history of the University, and subsequent events have proved this true.

On Hallowe'en, with great daring, some members of the class hung the class flag from the top of the power plant chimney. It hung there defiantly until noon next day, when after the fiercest class rush known to the college, the Sophomores succeeded in making way with the emblem. The first athletic event of the class was the Freshman-Sophomore football game which was unfortunately lost by a score of 5 to 27.

This score is not as discreditable as it may seem, for ten Freshmen were at the training table, which under the rules disqualified them for participation in the game; while the same was true of only two of the Sophomores. On March 8th, 1902, a dual track meet with 1904 resulted in a decisive victory for the Freshmen. The score was 58 to 41 in their favor.

The class organized a "Freshman Debating Club" under the encouragement of Mr. Chandler, which was altogether a new departure, for heretofore no debating club had ever existed in any of the classes of the University. It is an excellent place for foundation work for those who are striving to prepare themselves for inter-collegiate debates, and as such deserves the success and support it has received.

In October, 1902, the new Sophomore class was reorganized and new officers were elected.

These were: Mortimer Cahill, President; Fred Speik, Vice President; Miss Corinne E. Campbell, Secretary, and Mr. Logan A. Gridley, Treasurer. Monday, November 17th, the Freshmen met the Sophomores in the annual football game. Before the game the Freshmen were conceded to have the odds all in their favor because of their many excellent players from preparatory schools who were not on the regular team, while many Sophomores were on the training table. The boys of 1905 showed their spirit and pluck by playing a game which not only left the score a tie, but which was brilliant and spectacular in individual

Walker was elected President. The Freshman Debating Club was challenged, and on December 15th they met in joint debate. The work of the participants was excellent and the benefit of a close decision was awarded to the Freshmen.

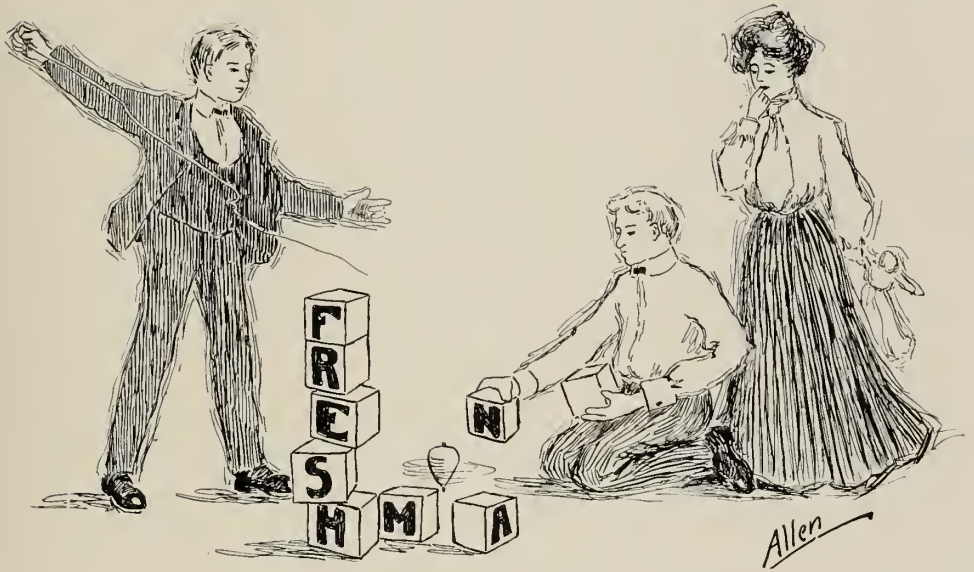

The class prospects are in every way of the brightest, both in scholarship and in athletics, and the members are full of all that is best in true, loyal, college spirit; all that is needed to promise a brilliant and successful future.

work. Early in October the boys of 1906 painted the sidewalks of the Campus with the flaring motto "'05 Beware '06." This challenge was speedily followed by notices, posted on fences, cafes, billboards and walls, which contained rules of behavior and commands from the Sophomores to the "green and verdant Freshmen." These rules were evidently just what were needed by the entering class, because after that nothing more was heard from them to back up their challenge.

The debating club was reorganized as soon as college reopened, as the "Sophomore Debating Club," and Mr. Paul A.

ALMOST within the first week of its entrance into college, the Class of 1906 began to make itself felt. On Wednesday morning, Oct. 8th, the following announcement appeared on the sidewalk between Cobb and Kent, and was conspicuous other places about the Campus:

“'05, Beware of '06.”

Then the wise ones began to look for trouble, but the Sophs made no move till on Tuesday morning, Oct. 14th, the students of the University were surprised to find numerous hand bills posted on fences and windows, addressed “To Those Verdant and Unsophisticated Freshmen.” The bills contained a set of rules to be followed by the men of '06. It took the Freshmen just one day to reply to this proclamation, for on the next morning the following notice was posted on the bulletin board: “Those verdant and unsophisticated Freshmen, to the most noble and illustrious Sophomores(?)”

“We are tired of living; kindly name time and place where you will relieve us of the burden.”

But alas! Prexie's order against an inter-class meeting, and his threats of dire punishment for any and all who should take part in such a fracas, had their effect, and neither side made further movement against the other.

The Class of 1906 is the third class in the history of the University to organize in its Freshman year. Urged to such a move by President Harper, a class meeting was held on Thursday, Oct. 16th, and Barrett C. Andrews was elected President after a lively contest between himself and the three other nominees, Fred Hall, Dickerson, and Clarence Buckwalter. So much time was occupied in naming the President that further elections were postponed till later. A second meeting was held in Kent on Thursday, Oct. 23rd. Here Mark Catlin, Miss Lillian Stephenson and Hubert Ellsworth were elected Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer, respectively. The President was invested with the power to appoint a committee to draft a constitution for this class. This was done and in a short time an entire organization was effected.

Because of the fact that they were not permitted to give vent to their feelings of hatred for one another in the usual informal way, the members of both classes had to be satisfied with letting a few of their strongest representatives fight for supremacy in the annual football game. When satisfied that they were able to do the deed, the Freshmen challenged. Immediately the Sophomores accepted, and the contest took place on Marshall Field on Monday, Nov. 17th. Though the day was dark and gloomy, the adherents of both sides were undaunted and flocked in generous numbers to the side-lines to support their heroes. Urged on by shouts of encouragement and rah-rah-rahs for '05 and '06, the twenty-two husky men shoved and banged one another from side to side and up and down the field for thirty-five long minutes. Now luck was with one side, now with the other, but when the whistle sounded the end of the last half neither team had scored and the ball was in the center of the field. Thus the score of enmity stands equal, and the members of both classes anxiously await the time when they will meet again in contest in events of the track and field.

In the matter of athletics the Class of 1906 has attained more distinction than any other Freshman class since the founding of the University. Its football team was the first to play any outside college or school, when it met on the gridiron, Harvard School of Chicago and the Freshmen of the University of Illinois. In both these games the team, lead by Fred Hall, did well, tying the former, and being defeated by the latter by the close margin of 5 to 0. The Freshman track team had the honor of being absolutely the first team to meet representatives of the University of Illinois in an indoor dual contest, which it won by four points. Most brilliant amongst the stars in this meet were Taylor, Catlin, Hall, Kelly, Carroll, Maxwell, Parry, Gale and Buckwalter, all of whom, besides many other good men, will prove valuable additions to the 'Varsity squad. In football, '06 contributed many of the men who proved of such worth and ability throughout the season. Most prominent among those men were Schnur, Wightman, "Big" Maxwell, Ivison, Tripp, Parry and Catlin. Again 1906 is distinguished in that it is the first Freshman year to have pictures of its football, baseball and track teams inserted in the "Cap and Gown."

But the ambitions of the first year men do not bend to athletics alone. Five of them are members of the board of reporters for The Daily Maroon. These are Messrs. Leroy A. Van Patten, Charles L. Darst, Edgar Ewing, E. D. F. Butterfield and Edward M. Kerwin, and all have shown themselves of such ability that the present editors of the paper have no fear for its future success. Moreover, there is a Freshman debating club, which was organized in October, and meets regularly every Tuesday night.

AS A FINAL WORD: Here's to 1906, and may it be as successful in its last years in college as it has been in its first.

The Dramatic Club

Probably of all student activities the one from which the members derive most pleasure is the Dramatic Club. It has succeeded in bringing together, during the past eight years of its existence, a host of most congenial people. Membership in the club is elective. The election is based upon the candidate's showing of "dramatic merit" in the regular club trials, which occur each quarter. Most of the members, however, had never done dramatic work of any kind before election to the club. The membership is limited to thirty, fifteen men and fifteen women.

The Dramatic Club gives at least two large performances during each college year. These productions are always looked forward to as the chief event of the quarter in which they occur. The midwinter dramatics usually come in January; the other appearance is on Junior Day. Besides these regular public exhibitions, the club has a social meeting each month, at which the members give vaudeville sketches, readings or a little farce, and then gather around red hots and coffee, or have an informal dance.

The principal performances during this year were staged under the direction of the club's professional coach, Mr. Bartley Cushing, and were cast as follows:

At the
AVDITORIVM PLAYE-HOVSE
A Pleasant Comedy
The Case is Alterd.
BEN. IONSON

Publicuely acted by Students in the Vniversitie for The Vniversitie Settlement
Saturday Maye Seventeenth
M. DCCCC. II

WHEN the Public Speaking Department of the University announced that the annual theatrical production for 1902 would be a presentation of Ben Jonson's "The Case Is Altered," much interest was awakened, especially when it became known that the play would be, as nearly as possible, a reproduction of the Elizabethan manner of staging. It is believed that the University performance was the first public presentation of this nature in Chicago. It is well known, however, that such productions have been witnessed at Yale and Harvard, as well as other colleges.

As was to be expected, a large number of applicants for parts presented themselves. Professor Clark, who selected the cast, and got the play under way, devised the plan of handing the various contestants for parts copies of the play and permitting them to choose what parts they would. This method of selecting the members of the cast met with entire satisfaction.

The players aimed at presenting the Elizabethan theatre in all its details; and that they were successful is the unanimous verdict of all who were present at the play. From the flag which hung from the tower of the play-house to the minutest details of staging, all was reproduced; the rabble crowding into the pit in trained disorder, followed by the more elegant tradesman and nobles, who took their places of distinction on the stage, the flower-girls and orange-girls vending their wares before the play, and between the acts; the trumpeter to quiet the throng and announce the prologue; and, finally, the quaint actors to please the crowds.

The production was given under the stage-direction of Mr. Bruce Short of New York City. To him, as well as to the members of the Public Speaking Department and the members of the various committees, much credit for the success of the play is due. For the successful business management of the play, credit must be given to managers and their committees.

The complete cast of the play was as follows :

'02 Class Day

UNIQUE Class Day exercises, both humorous and serious, held by the Class of '02 on June 16, make the recollection of that day thoroughly pleasing. Many pictures, bright with college color, are in the minds of '02's and their friends. More than 150 members of the class, arrayed in cap and gown, were together on the Central Quadrangles from early forenoon until nearly 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and during the day the word farewell, in some form, was said 6,650 times, according to the count of a mathematics student. At 10:45 the class formed in a large "C" around the flag pole. Dean Tufts gave the reasons why the University had set aside a day for the class, and spoke of the significance of emblems. Then, while the members were singing "Vive la Naughty-Two," Miss Jessie E. Sherman, the Class Vice President, pulled the rope which raised a large maroon flag, lettered "1902," to the top of the tall pole, where it floated until sundown in recognition of the day given over officially to the class graduating from the Senior college.

The spectators hurried across the quadrangle to secure seats in the gymnasium, and the class, in solemn procession, slowly followed to carry out the "'02 Bene Vale to the Old Gym." This was a mock convocation. The sombre Seniors marched into the gymnasium chanting their ponderous "Bene Vale Dirge," a sad stanza in Latin. As the members reached the seats reserved for them at the front, those in the audience realized that the tune for this processional was "Yankee Doodle." After valedictory addresses "The Award of Class Honors" and degrees was made. The members of the class who had won distinction in baseball, track athletics, football, tennis and women's athletics were led by the marshalls up narrow steps, six feet high, to a platform at the north end of the gymnasium floor. There the various deans, arrayed in significant paraphernalia, presented the candidates. Mr. Herbert E. Fleming, the Class President, prompted by Mr. Benjamin G. Lee, who whispered audibly through a large tin megaphone, gave an imitation of President Harper at a convocation. In conferring the novelties called degrees, upon the various candidates he read the following Latin address, written by Miss Sherman and Miss Josephine Lackner:

Vos Juvenes, up to me, qui per longibus tempores classibus cuttibus—may I say—et coursiorum flunkibus frequentissimorum in basehallorum (trackum, footballorum, tennis ballum, cultus physical coedicationis) ex-kellunt, cum auctoritate—on the one hand—high muckmuckibus of the classo Uno Thousand Nine Centum et Duo, et—on the other—cum auctoritate Prexibus Universitatis Chicagoensis, maximam deservit. In cuius rei haec testimonium—take.

In conclusion, Professor Stagg was ushered to the platform, and a special honorary degree, Summa Cum Laude, was conferred for the class upon the respected director of athletics. This was the degree, B.A., "qui significat Boss of Athletics."

The platform was cleared and the most comic performance of the day was given. This was the presentation of "The Case is Altered," a pathetic tragedy in one act, written by Mr. William A. Averill, who took the leading role as a professional funeral director. On many counts the Old Gym was sent down the "elevator" to Satan's realm of flames, making way for the new Bartlett gymnasium. The Old Gym was affectionately referred to as "Gymmy." The farewell ode, in which a light-footed chorus of "towel girls" (Messrs. Robertson, Jayne and Gross), led the entire cast, was sung to the tune of "Dolly Gray," and ran as follows:

Goodby, Gymmy, we must leave you, though we hate to have you go.
 Something tells us you are needed for fuel down below.
 Hark, your elevator's going; you cannot stay longer here;
 Goodby, Gymmy, we must leave you; goodbye Gymmy dear.

After the recessional, in which '02 took its last lap around the Old Gym track, the members of the class and their relatives gathered in the Convocation tent at the center of the campus for luncheon.

An inspiring procession about the quadrangles attracted attention to the afternoon exercises. Headed by the University Military Band and followed by a large company of friends, the long double column of men and women, in academic black, moved from building to building for "The Quadrangle Farewell." A feeling of pleasant sadness came to the members of the class during the opening exercises on the lawn in front of the Women's Halls, when Miss Margaret Donnan, speaking the farewell words, said she was trying to smile and be cheerful for the same reason that a man whistles to keep up his courage. Appropriate exercises were held in Hull Court, near the Class Ivy, at the door of Kent Theatre, and at Cobb Lecture Hall. By the time the procession reached the steps of Cobb a large crowd had gathered in the semi-circle of seats under the trees around the Senior Bench. The members of the class took the chairs reserved nearest the oblong mass of gray stone, and there the Class Day exercises established in University tradition were held.

In the introductory address Mr. Fleming expressed the gratitude of the class for the many gifts its members had received from the University; and above all, the gift of university spirit, which was interpreted to be the universal spirit. The Class History, by Miss Mabel K. Whiteside, was received with most enthusiastic applause. The history was written in the style of Cæsar's "Commentaries," and referred to Dr. Harper as Cæsar, with such delicate cleverness, that the President, sitting near the historian, appeared to be greatly amused. Miss Whiteside said that Cæsar, while in "winter quarters at Morgan Park," heard frequent rumors "that a conspiracy was being formed against our women;" and that "Cæsar, being much moved by these reports, came back as soon as there was a supply of grass in the spring, and endeavored by sweet persuasion to conciliate the women." The class gift, a window for Mandel Hall, was presented to the University by Mr. Bertram G. Nelson. President Harper responded for the University, and as he left the exercises the members of the class rose and waved their handkerchiefs in "a salute to Cæsar." The class poem, entitled "College Doors," was read by Miss Clara Kretzinger. Finally the Class of '02 surrendered its position of seniority. Mr. David G. Robertson presented the Senior Bench and Miss Josephine Lackner the Senior Cap and Gown to the Class of 1903. Mr. Thomas J. Hair and Miss Narcissa Cox gave the responses for the Seniors of this year. All joined in the "Alma Mater" and the '02 Class Day exercises were ended. At the President's reception that evening, Dr. Harper made members of the graduating class very happy by saying, concerning the events of the day: "1902 has set the pace."

Freshman Debating Club

VERNON A. WOODWORTH	Treasurer

The second Freshman Debating Club of the University was organized last October by Mr. Chandler. Those entrusted with its management during its infancy were: President, Lester L. Falk; Vice President, Miss Grace Williamson; Secretary, Miss Bessie C. Holt; Treasurer, V. A. Woodworth; fifth member of the Executive Committee, Ivan C. Vogt. The object of the club is to foster debating in the Freshman Class, and the members of the club seemed decided to waste as little time as possible to attain this object. At the second meeting of the club the constitution was adopted, and four members of the club engaged in a spirited debate. This meeting bore out the promise of the first; it showed that there was an interest in debating in the Freshman class, and that the members of the club were determined to make the Debating Club a useful reality and not a fanciful dream.

One of the first evidences of the Freshmen's power in debating was manifested in a joint debate with the Sophomores, in which the Freshmen were successful. Mr. Joseph Lewinsohn and Miss Bessie C. Holt represented the Freshmen in this contest. Early in the spring quarter the annual Freshman-Sophomore formal debate is slated. The Freshman team, consisting of Thomas Meek, H. C. Lust and Lester L. Falk, was selected by competitive trial, similar to the trial for the 'Varsity team.

From the past experience of the Freshmen Debating Clubs we may well say that these clubs have come to stay.

Sophomore Debating Club

Among the many recent manifestations of increased interest in University debating, the progress made by the Sophomore Debating Club is not the least important. Organized by the members of the Class of 1905 in the winter of 1902, the society, after completing a brilliant career as the "Freshman Debating Club," perpetuated itself by the formation of a Sophomore organization. With this change came a new Freshman Club, the membership of which is composed of '06 students. Thus the plan devised by Mr. Henry Porter Chandler, for maintaining a "debating spirit" in the Junior colleges, was realized in its completeness for the first time.

The past history of the club is a record of earnest effort, punctuated by occasional departures from its routine path into enlarged fields of activity. The club, which met every week in its first year, now has regular semi-monthly meetings, at which prepared debates are heard. These contests are characterized more by an attempt to sift the evidence and present sound argument than by a struggle to master oratorical ability; but the force of persuasion, of course, is always sought in addition to the weight of logic. Current topics in politics, literature and science furnish interesting questions for the "verbal battles," and not infrequently subjects of local color that concern themselves with University matters afford appropriate resolutions for debate.

Under the auspices of this club a Freshman team was chosen to meet the Sophomores in debate last year. It is worthy of note that the three Freshman debaters who were chosen—George O. Fairweather, Paul A. Walker and Leo F. Wormser—were all members of the club; a fact that seems to argue well in behalf of the work which the club did, since its members were successful in competition against other Freshman debaters who were not members of the club.

In this connection Mr. Chandler deserves praise as one who is not only largely responsible for the formation of the club, but who also has aided its every undertaking.

The Chess Club has just entered upon a period of rapid development. It has had two matches with experts from the Chicago Chess Club and more such matches are being arranged. Negotiations are under way to bring about tournaments with the Northwestern and Wisconsin Universities.

The Chess Club has a membership of about twenty-five regular players, and some men who only enter into occasional tournaments. It has a room in Graduate Hall where boards and men are kept. The growth of the club and the improvement in the material for a chess team has been marked since the first simultaneous match.

The Canadian Club is composed of students, instructors and officials of the University who are of British birth or parentage. Its objects are to bring its members into social contact and to fittingly observe Canadian national holidays and events. It has a membership of about sixty, nearly all of whom are in the graduate schools. All the Canadian universities are represented and all the Provinces of Canada. Several members are native-born English or Scotch.

Fellows Club

Officers

AUGUSTUS RAYMOND HATTON (Pol. Science)	President
WM. C. GUNNERSON (Sanskrit and Indo-European)	Vice President
CHARLES INGBERT (Neurology)	Secretary-Treasurer

The Fellows Club was organized during the Autumn of 1902. Students appointed Fellows may become members at any time after their appointment by signing the constitution of the Club. Persons who have held Fellowships and are still in residence as students may become members by a majority vote of all the members of the Club.

The purposes of the organization are to promote social intercourse among the Fellows of the University; to broaden the outlook of each member by bringing him in contact with men working in other lines than his own; to give the Fellows such an organization that they may be more useful to the University, to the graduate students and to each other.

Meetings are held once each month and are intended to be largely social in character. However, matters relating to graduate study are discussed and such action taken by the Club as seems to be in the interest of graduate students in the University of Chicago and elsewhere.

This society was organized during the Winter Quarter, 1903. Its purpose is to do the work of a general students' literary society. The founders felt that there was a distinct need for such an organization in the University, and they hoped that it would become a permanent feature of the student activity. Any student of the University is eligible to membership. The aim of the society is to supplement the work of the class room by giving its members not only the practice of writing and reading, speaking, declaiming and debating from the platform, but also the benefit of each other's criticisms. The meetings occur regularly, Friday evenings of each week, and an effort is being made to secure suitable, permanent quarters. An unique feature which is at present under discussion, and will probably be adopted is a "chapter of honor." Members who have attained distinction in a literary or oratorical line may be elected with the sanction of a large majority of the other members to the honorary chapter. Such persons are entitled to wear a distinguishing badge of honor and to appear in the annual program. The membership of the society is limited to 40.

The University Settlement

House 4638 Ashland Avenue

THE University Settlement is situated on Ashland Ave., near 47th St., in one of those districts where such an institution is most needed, can do most practical good and is at first least appreciated—the Stockyards' district. Beginning humbly in one modest little building with but a handful of faithful workers, it has grown until now, occupying the whole of four flats, it is really what the name indicates—a Settlement—a little center for higher social, civic and indirectly a higher religious life.

The principal work of the Settlement is carried on in two buildings, the Settlement House and the Gymnasium. At the House live the main workers, about eight in number, all of whom pay their own board, and are expected to remain at least six months. Here also meet some of the classes in English and composition, as well as some of the musical clubs, but most of the active work is carried on at the Gymnasium.

The Gymnasium, on Gross Ave., near 47th St., is simply a neighborhood club house, a common meeting place for people of all nationalities and creeds on a common brotherly footing, a platform for free discussion of all labor and social problems, and a place for recreation of mind and body. An attempt is made in the many opportunities offered to reach all classes of people, from the lowest up, irrespective of creed, social standing or intellectual ability, to aid them, interest them, cheer them, and above all, to give them a chance for self advancement. It is a most delicate task, and one requiring pluck and energy, and a never ending supply of patience.

As a result many kinds of classes and clubs have been organized, both for old and young, men and women. There are classes in music: The Mandolin Orchestra, Children's Chorus, Sky Lark Chorus and the Orpheus Chorus. There are classes in manual training, design, and dress making. For men and boys athletically inclined there is the Alliance Athletic Club, and the Working Boys' Gymnasium Class. For the girls and women there are two classes in regular gymnastic work, and one in basket ball. The clubs are many and interesting. Among them are: The Little Neighbors' Club, the Recreation Club, the Bohemian Mothers' Club and the Children's Hour. No person can become a member of more than one club, and each club must have some educational end in view, with one purely social evening, not more than once a month.

Of late a class of people have been reached which never could before be touched, the girls who work in the Packing Houses in the Stockyards. These girls started a Labor Union about a year ago with a mere handful, and now that same Union is 975 strong, meeting at the Gymnasium. In connection with the settlement, but not supported directly by it, are several affiliated interests. For instance, at the Gymnasium, the Public Library has a station; at 48th St. and Ashland Ave. is a dispensary with two women physicians in charge.

Perhaps the reader wonders where the money comes from for the support of the Institution, and the query is easily answered. The Gymnasium cost about $11,000, and was the gift of a few Chicago men and women. The expense of lighting and heating the Gymnasium does not devolve upon any one person, for each class pays its own share of the heating and lighting from a very small monthly fee. The expense of the rent, heat, light, and salary of the head president, Miss McDowell, and the janitor is met by the University of Chicago Settlement Board from voluntary contribution. Almost all the instructors are University students who contribute their services.

No one can estimate the length, and breadth and strength of the work that is being done in that district, and of the good being done. It is surely God's own labor, and as such should have all the support we can give it.

The Woman's Union

AMONG all the student organizations at the University none has ever been so far reaching in its benefits, so practical in its advantages and so democratic in spirit as the Woman's Union, organized in January, 1902, "to unite the women of the University for the promotion of their common interests." Starting with a mere handful of faithful and enthusiastic workers, including both students and women of the Faculty, the membership has grown until now the books show a list of almost four hundred, and names are being constantly added. But the success of the Union is not measured or represented by the length of its registration alone, for the benefits derived from membership are varied and along several lines.

Formerly all women connected with the University who did not live at the Halls or near the Campus brought their lunches with them, and the only accommodations for eating them or for resting were in the cloak rooms and recitation rooms. Now all that is changed. In the Union Rooms, which are at Lexington Hall, the new woman's building, on Lexington Avenue, lunch is served every day from 12:00 to 2:00 p. m., and for a moderate sum, soup, chocolate, sandwiches, fruit cake and pickles may be obtained. Other special accommodations are a rest room and reading room, in which may be found the daily paper and all the late magazines. Here, every day, from fifty to a hundred girls meet to eat, and chat, and rest. It is one of the unwritten laws of the Union that no stranger be allowed to eat luncheon alone, so that the Union, while offering material advantages, is also doing a great work along another much needed line. It is fostering and developing a spirit of equality and democracy which gives promise of a bright future.

Other attractions are the informal receptions held every Wednesday afternoon, at which there is always some special feature, and where, over a cup of tea, the girls have a chance for many a delightful chat with women of the hour. Thus the girls enjoy not only the advantage of becoming acquainted with each other, but also the privilege of meeting the wives of the Faculty and other women.

A word as to the management of the Union. The rooms are open daily from 8:00 a. m. to 6:00 p. m., and during these hours a woman custodian is always in attendance. The actual work of the Union is carried on chiefly by committees organized under chairmen, and the chairmen of these various committees, together with the president, vice president, treasurer and secretary, meet as a council which transacts the general business of the Union.

At the annual election held on January 14, 1903, the following officers were elected for 1903:

MISS M. TALBOT	President
MISS C. COMSTOCK	Vice President
MISS M. RICHARDSON	Secretary
MISS R. HARDY	Treasurer
MISS G. DUDLEY	Chairman of House Committee
MISS S. R. BRECKINRIDGE	Chairman of Membership Committee
MISS T. B. WEIL	Chairman of Hospitality Committee
MISS ISABEL WEBSTER	Chairman of Finance Committee
MISS FRANCES TAUSSIG	Chairman of Philanthropic Committee
MRS. R. G. MOULTON	Chairman of Music Committee
MRS. C. KINSLEY	Chairman of Lunch Room Committee

One of the most important and effective committees is the Philanthropic Committee, whose work is organized along three lines. In the first place, it attempts to administer, as far as possible, to all of the community of the University who are ill or in distress. In the second place it tries to furnish workers for the University Settlement. It was especially of service along this line during the summer months, and its efforts are being directed at present toward awakening an interest among the members of the Union in behalf of the Consumers' League.

Along business lines the Union has not only been self-supporting, but has to its credit in the bank a sum amounting to $67.73.

Miss M. Richardson, in her annual report, summed it up well when she said: "It has given us a sympathy for one another, and has brought us closer together. Nor by 'us' do I mean the girls who have always known each other, but the members of the Union, friends and strangers alike."

The Student Volunteer Band

Of the University of Chicago

THE Student Volunteer Band of the University of Chicago is one of the many organizations of its kind scattered throughout the various schools of this city, and found in the many universities, colleges, and professional schools in the country at large. The ritual which binds these bands together is this motto: "The Evangelization of the World in this Generation."

Membership in the Band as it exists at the University is eligible to all those having this purpose in life: "It is my purpose, if God permits, to become a foreign missionary." There are at present twelve members in the University. Meetings are held on every second week at which times programs are rendered that are intended to be of individual benefit in strengthening the convictions and enlarging the plans for the future life-work; and of mutual benefit in consolidating the work as it may be carried on now at the University. The Band is especially desirous of presenting itself favorably to all those who have not yet decided upon their life-work and are interested, with earnest purpose, in this world wide movement.

In the near future a movement may be started to select and support a missionary who will represent the University of Chicago in the foreign field.

The University of Chicago Weekly

Decennial Souvenir

Edited By

BYRON G. MOON

The University of Chicago Weekly, which was founded October 1, 1892, the day the University opened its class rooms, and which served as an outlet for student journalistic and literary ambition for ten years, closed its career October 1, 1902, to make room for its successors, the Daily and Monthly Maroon. The means it chose of making an end were, however, worthy of its long and honorable career and a fitting way of celebrating its tenth and last birthday. It was, naturally enough, with a souvenir issue that the Weekly passed away—a Decennial Souvenir, containing 108 pages of reading matter and cuts, handsomely made up and carefully edited, chronicling the history of the University and of the Weekly from the beginning.

The Souvenir was planned and edited by Robert L. Henry, Jr., '02, managing editor of the Weekly during the summer quarter, '02, and Charles W. Collins, '03, managing editor of the Weekly during the winter quarter, '02, while Byron G. Moon, business manager and owner of the Weekly, acted as business manager and publisher. The book was divided into six sections, each of which was profusely illustrated, viz: A history of the genesis of the University and Campus; description of each of the buildings; biographical sketches of prominent members of the Faculty; a history of the Weekly; student activities; and affiliated institutions.

"The Daily Maroon, Founded October 1, 1902"

THESE words, standing at the head of the editorial column in the University of Chicago newspaper which has been published every University day since the opening of the autumn quarter, record the inauguration of a student activity which is quite generally considered to be the most universal in interest established during the University year.

The Daily Maroon has come as the result of a demand felt and expressed with growing force ever since the founding of the University.

This is the need for some medium through which the varied interests in the institution may find expression and the many groups within the Quadrangle community brought together in a common feeling of University solidarity.

Three attempts to meet this demand have been made in past years. The first daily, named The University News, appeared October 17, 1892, and continued nearly until the close of the University's first year, suspending publication April 19, 1893. The second effort was undertaken by means of a tri-weekly. In adopting the University color as the name for that paper—The Maroon—the publishers made a contribution which has come down to the publications of the present day. The first appearance of the tri-weekly took place on May 15, 1895, and its last on March 20, 1896. The third endeavor was made in the spring of 1900, when an attractive newspaper called The Daily Maroon was published from May 7th to 9th; suspended by the Faculty Board of Student Organizations; resumed publication May 21st; and discontinued June 19th.

During that spring most of the men who have shared in establishing The Daily Maroon of today were in college, and the present managing editor and one of the associate editors were appointees on the reportorial staff of the attempted publication. Consequently the experiences in connection with that endeavor have proved to be valuable lessons. The paper, edited and owned by Earl D. Howard, '02, was so popular that the universality of the demand for a daily was emphasized. The temporary suspension, justified because the editors were duped into printing a supposed scandal, has fixed for University of Chicago student-publishers the principle which assures daily loyalty to the best interests of their Alma Mater.

All three of the attempts enforced the vital point that to live the daily must be thoroughly organized on a business basis and as a student activity.

The immediate movement which has resulted in The Daily Maroon, now established, originated during the fall quarter of 1901. At that time Herbert E. Fleming, '02, University correspondent for one of the city papers, and managing editor of the University Weekly for that quarter, proposed to Byron G. Moon, business manager and owner of The Weekly that some plan be devised for developing The Weekly into a daily newspaper and a monthly literary magazine. They prepared separate documents containing suggestions and together submitted them to President Harper. Both stated that some scheme of business management which would insure stability was the imperative requirement. The managing editor suggested official University business management, such as is carried out successfully in student athletics. The business manager proposed that the University grant a subsidy.

These proposals were sent by the President to the Board of Student Organizations. A thorough faculty discussion followed. Professors who had been editors of student papers at Yale, Harvard and other institutions gave many valuable suggestions. The result of the discussion was a definite expression of the sentiment that the University must never officially subsidize the organ for student opinion nor exercise a censorship over it. The papers were withdrawn and the movement was apparently dropped.

Toward the close of the winter quarter in that year, however, ten men, on invitation from Mr. Fleming, joined in a determination to undertake the financial and editorial responsibility for publishing a daily newspaper during the next college year provided the student-body would give them authority to do so. These men were: Herbert E. Fleming, '02; Robert L. Henry, Jr., '02; Charles W. Collins, '03; Walker G. McLaury, '03; Harry W. Ford, '04; Oliver B. Wyman, '04; Frank McNair, '03; Francis F. Tische, '03; John F. Adams, Medic; Adelbert T. Stewart, '04.

They posted notices calling a mass meeting to be held May 15, "for the organization of a new student activity." The object of the proposed mass meeting was explained to the Seniors by Mr. Fleming, the class president, and the '02's were the first to go on record for the project. They unanimously adopted a resolution to attend the mass meeting as a class. The notice aroused considerable curiosity as the day for the meeting was approached.

In the meantime Mr. Moon had been working individually on plans. He had associated with himself Platt M. Conrad, '03, and Julian L. Brode, '05, in a stock company organized for the purpose of expanding The Weekly into a daily and monthly. Hence there were two movements on foot simultaneously but without avowed antagonism.

From time to time, President Harper had shown great interest in suggestions for a daily. He had promised to attend the mass meeting and had been announced as one of the speakers. On the day before the meeting he invited Mr. Fleming and Mr. Moon to his office and pointed out the evident advantages of combination.

The obstacle to be overcome lay in the fact that the ownership of The Weekly was vested in Mr. Moon, who had a considerable sum of capital involved. In the early days of the University, it had been found advisable to permit the system of private ownership for The Weekly. The ten men working for the establishment of a daily held that the student body as a whole should own its publications; and they were unwilling to buy The Weekly. But it was known to them that for some time Mayo Fesler, Secretary of the Alumni Association, had thought of proposing Alumni responsibility for a daily. He was appealed to as the man holding the key to the situation. Mr. Fesler expressed the belief that the Alumni Association would purchase The Weekly from Mr. Moon.

The mass meeting was held the next day, May 15, as announced. The students filled Kent theatre to the doors. They adopted a resolution offered by Allan Burns, the cheer leader. By this resolution, the student-body requested the Alumni Association to purchase The Weekly; gave the ten men who had called the meeting and Roy D. Keehn, '02, and Eli P. Gale, '03, whose names had been added to the list, authority to become the board of editors for the publications during one year and to select their successors on the merit basis; and recommended that the Alumni Association name Mr. Moon as business manager.

This plan did not meet with favor among the Alumni, but its tentative consideration served as the means for progress in the movement. On Alumni Day, a Committee of Fifteen was appointed by the Association to consider the plan. Toward the end of the summer quarter, after many meetings, this committee was about to send out to the Alumni membership an adverse recommendation. Mr. Moon thereupon withdrew his proposition to the Association and made a generous offer to the board of editors; in this proposal he assumed the risk of regaining his invested capital from possible net profits to be earned by the proposed publications during the first two years.

On July 31, with Henry Gale, '96, of the Alumni committee acting as advisor, Mr. Moon and Mr. Fleming, representing the editors, framed and signed an agreement which is the working basis for The Daily Maroon and The Monthly Maroon. This provides that the publications are the property of the student-body, held in trust by the combined board of editors and the business manager. The financial responsibility is equally divided between the business manager and the board. The agreement provides explicitly that future boards of editors shall be selected on the merit basis, after competition open to all students in the University. This board through an auditing committee, has access to the books; and elects the business manager, the retiring business manager nominating. With the execution of this agreement The Daily Maroon and The Monthly Maroon are self-supporting student activities.

The first election was held and a general plan of editorial organization adopted at a meeting of the board June 13. Mr. Keehn and Mr. Collins were elected executive editors for The Monthly, severing editorial connection with The Daily. The first executive editors elected for The Daily Maroon were: Herbert E. Fleming, managing editor; Harry W. Ford, news editor; Eli P. Gale, athletic editor. It was provided that the other members should be associate editors. The first seven associate editors were: Robert L. Henry, Jr., Walker G. McLaury, Oliver B. Wyman, Frank McNair, Francis F. Tische, Adelbert T. Stewart and John F. Adams.

In September Mr. Ford resigned to accept a professional editorial position. Mr. Wyman was elected news editor and Frank R. Adams, '04, was elected to the board as associate editor. Mr. Gale resigned as athletic editor but continued as associate editor. Mr. Henry was elected athletic editor. Mr. John F. Adams resigned and Austin A. Hayden, '02, and a Junior at Rush Medical College, was elected as associate editor to fill the vacancy. As authorized in the mass meeting, the board provided for representing the women students. Miss Cornelia S. Smith, '03, and Miss Julia M. Hobbs, '03, were elected as the first women editors. During the year several changes have taken place in the personnel of the board. At the opening of the winter quarter, to fill vacancies caused by the resignation of Mr. McLaury and Miss Hobbs, Walter L. Gregory, '05, was elected an associate editor and Miss Agnes Wayman, '03, to be one of the women editors.

Volume I, Number 1 of The Daily Maroon came from the press-room in the new building of The University of Chicago Press at 4 o'clock October 1st. The type-setting and printing have been done at The University Press all year. Until March 1, a force of twelve compositors on the fourth floor was ready to drop all other work and set type for The Daily Maroon. This spring a linotype and an additional printing press have been added to the equipment of The Press to facilitate publishing the paper. From the first issue the typographical appearance of the paper has attracted very favorable attention. In fact The Daily Maroon has been printed in much better than newspaper style. The arrangements between The Maroon and The University Press are on a strictly business basis; and this fine printing has made the expense of publishing The Daily Maroon greater than that of any university students' newspaper in America. The University has given The Maroon, as a student enterprise, an office at Room 7 on the main floor of the Press building; and this has greatly facilitated editorial work. The University has patronized the paper as an advertiser at regular rates; but has not exercised a censorship over it either directly or indirectly.

The plan in editorial management has been to adapt the system of metropolitan dailies as far as possible to the conditions in the University field. The general principle has been to have as large a number of workers as possible with a minute division of labor every day. This is urgent because in issuing an afternoon paper the editors have found that all other considerations must give way to the necessity of rushing the copy up stairs. The news editor makes the assignments for general university newsgathering and edits manuscript; the athletic editor does the same for his field and writes editorialized critiques on the athletic situation; the associate editors divide the work of copy-reading—that is, editing manuscript—writing editorials, and conducting departments. The managing editor's duty to co-ordinate these efforts.

The special departments have served to give variety to the paper. The "Gargoylettes," an editorial page section containing a daily grist of jokes, has attracted a large part of the Maroon's constituency and compares favorably with the best humorous column in the city papers. Mr. Adams has edited this department and contributed the larger part of the "Gargoylettes." Mr. Tische has edited "The News From the Universities," a department which has kept Chicago students in touch with American college life. He has also done the proofreading. Mr. Hayden has edited "The Rush Medic Notes," sending news from the West Side so toned as to aid in the incorporation of Rush Medical College student life into that of the University. Mr. Gregory, besides editing manuscript has directed the make-up. Associate Editors Gale, Stewart and McNair have written editorials and edited copy. Miss Smith has been the Society Editor and Miss Wayman has edited the Women's athletic news. The Majors and Minors and Punts from the Bleachers, departments in The Weekly, have been kept up in The Daily.

The members of the first board have united in an endeavor to lay a firm foundation for building up The Daily Maroon as an institution. To this end they have held weekly board meetings Tuesday afternoons. At these councils each member reports criticisms he has heard from subscribers and makes suggestions. The board's actions on all questions of policy in reference to news and editorials are binding on the executive editors. In order that future boards may have whatever permanent benefit these discussions afford, a book of records is kept. Francis F. Tische was elected secretary.

Competition for membership on the staff of reporters and the board of editors began with the first day of newsgathering. To increase the interest in this competition the editorial board invented the Maroon star, a small five-pointed button finished in maroon enamel with gold border and backing. The rule adopted is that any student making the staff of reporters may wear the star during his term as a reporter; and that a reporter winning a place on the board may keep his star. It is planned to have an annual social affair for those who have the badge. During the autumn quarter there were twenty candidates whom the editors call Hustlers working to win the star. The staff for each quarter is to be comprised of twelve reporters, at least two of whom shall be women students. Those who won places on the first staff are named in the list at the head of this article. Their stars were formally presented at a Maroon Smoker, held in the Chi Psi Lodge January 10, the first Saturday in the winter quarter. At that time the upper class men on the staff made speeches declaring their determination to continue in the work so that The Daily Maroon shall live.

The business manager and his assistants have done effective service. They have found the business men in a well-worked advertising field appreciative of The Daily Maroon as a medium for reaching the students in the University of Chicago world. "The Maroon Daily World" was a name proposed for the journal of today at the time of the sanctioning mass meeting. On further consideration, however, the editors and business manager concluded that they had no fear of the name developed in the experiments of the past. As the paper has gone on in its growth toward the completion of Volume I they have often expressed the conviction that The Daily Maroon will continue to be "Published Afternoons by the Students of the University of Chicago During the Four Quarters of the University year," as long as there are University days and University years.

RESOLUTIONS giving a committee of thirteen men, chosen for experience in editorial work, authority to proceed with the organization of a daily newspaper and a monthly literary magazine, and to conduct the editorial work of these publications for one year, were passed before the student body, assembled in mass meeting May 15, 1902. The two publications were to be under the same business management, Byron G. Moon, business manager of the University of Chicago Weekly, being entrusted with that function. The papers were to supplant the Weekly, of which they were the logical outgrowth.

A meeting of the joint editorial board was held June 13, 1902, for the purpose of organization and election of officers. Roy D. Keehn, '02, was elected editor-in-chief and Charles W. Collins, '03, associate editor of the magazine. These two men were given authority by the other members of the committee, who preferred to work on the Daily, power to provide for the editorial management of the paper, and to appoint a staff of assistant editors, to be chosen on a merit basis. The two editors began work on their first issue, which was to appear in the first week of November, as soon as college opened in the fall. After a long discussion it was decided to call the magazine The Monthly Maroon, in view of its close connection with the Daily, which had already been baptized The Daily Maroon.

The first issue, for November, containing sixty-three pages of reading matter, was a decided success and was welcomed heartily by students and faculty. The exchange editors of other college journals waxed almost poetic in gratulatory comments.

An editorial policy of interest and vivacity combined with literary merit could be read between the lines of the first issue, and has been maintained through the later issues, each of which has been equal or superior to the initial number. As a consequence of this policy the expositions and literary criticisms which make most college monthlies a joy for the pundit, a thing of awe to the frivolous undergrad and a target for the jokes of the comic paper, have been few in number, while clever fiction and breezy articles of timely interest have taken the leading part. In make-up the Monthly has followed the models set by such magazines as Ainslee's, McClure's, and the Smart Set. No cuts were used in the first number, but in the December issue the policy of illustrating the leading article with a frontispiece and several half-tones was instituted and has been maintained. A distinct departure from the beaten paths of college literary journals was made in the January issue, when a short story in French was printed. The wide interest shown by the student body in the study of French suggested the idea to the editors, and by the help of Professor Maxime Ingres, a number of sketches in French, by student-authors, of genuine literary merit were secured. This feature of the magazine will be continued through the year. A new cover design has been used each month, the editors planning to get out as attractive a magazine as possible. The artists who designed the covers for the first four numbers are: Donald Kennicott, November; Strong Vincent Norton, December; Jane Walker, January; Benjamin Cohen, February.

After the January issue the appointment of Donald Kennicott, '03; Frank Adams, '04; Charles A. Kent and David A. Robertson, '02, to the rank of assistant editors, was announced by the editor-in-chief and associate editor. The choice was made upon the merits of contributions to the first three numbers. This election does not complete the staff of assistant editors, and other candidates may be appointed as their ability is demonstrated.

An alumni department is an important feature of the magazine. Until the Alumni Association is able to edit a magazine devoted solely to alumni news and interest The Monthly Maroon will serve as its official organ. Each issue contains from eight to ten pages of reading matter of interest to alumni, following the literary section of the magazine. Edward G. Woods acts as alumni editor.

A list of contributors to the first four numbers of the magazine follows: Charles W. Collins, Donald Kennicott, Frank Adams, Susan Grant, Benjamin Nicholson, Laura Bliss Lane, Charles A. Kent, Edith Brownell, Edward G. Woods, David A. Robertson, Maurice C. Lipman, William Chambers Meyers, Frederick Dennison Bramhall, Charles A. Huston, Ethel Claire Randall, Margaret E. Burton, Bennett Epstein, Rae Baldwin, Jefferson D. Blything, Marie G. Ortmyer, Mary Mills, Robert Stinson Starbird, Strong Vincent Norton, William W. Sheppard, Theodore B. Hinckley, Eugene Kline, Mary Ella Robinson and Genevieve Tomlinson; for the alumni: Theodore M. Hammond, '85; Eugene Parsons '83.

THE '05 Class of Rush Medical College stands apart from any former class in that they were the first students to take their Freshman Course at the University of Chicago. Their arrival on the Campus marked a new era in the affairs of Rush Medical College. It was like starting a new school, and it fell to the lot of the "'05's'" to set the precedent for the forthcoming students of this new school—the Medical Department of the University of Chicago. Thus far they have shown themselves amply capable of the task.

Early in the Autumn Quarter, 1901, the class assembled in one of the laboratories; the men perched themselves in the windows, on the desks and tables, or any other article of furniture handy, and proceeded to effect a class organization. Each man was ignorant of the other's abilities, so the class cast about to select the best looking man for President. Mr. Sidney Klein was elected (apologies to the class). Mr. Joseph L. Baer was elected Vice President, and Mr. Charles Freytag, Secretary. Before the meeting adjourned a rumor spread through the assembly that the Sophomores, who had learned their tricks at Rush, were lined up in the hall ready to devour or otherwise annihilate this infant organization. A whispered consultation was held, and although some advocated escaping by means of the fire escape, it was finally decided to brave the storm. At a given signal the door was thrown open—and then the '05's "got busy." Hats, canes, coats, collars and neckties soon occupied the upper strata of the atmosphere in the hallway, while below a surging mass of humanity moved slowly but surely toward the steps, and down and out into Hull Court. The Sophs went first but unwillingly. The Naughty '05's had won their first victory.

At the end of the year the class was probably the best organized Freshman Class Rush had ever had. Too much cannot be said of President Klein for his untiring efforts in raising the standard of the class to such a high grade of excellence. Nearly every man returned this year. The class has raised a hospital fund for the benefit of any of its members who may be confined in the hospitals. Thus a strong bond of brotherhood exists throughout the class, and up to the present time the class bids fair to be one of the strongest Rush ever turned out.

The Ground Hog

By Heinrich Heinz
Illustrated by C. D. Givesome

The ground hog staid
Comes out of the shade
Of his lair in the cold, cold earth;
He looks in the sky
No sun is nigh,
With a smile he gives vent to his mirth.

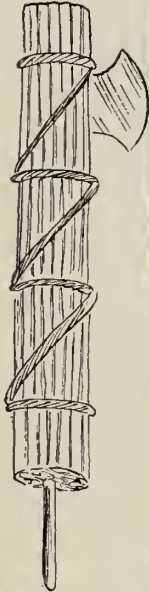

He changes his gaze
To a look of amaze,
And disgust his features streaks,
For the sunlight crowds
Through the heavy clouds,
So he sleeps for another six weeks.

THE NEW LAW BUILDING

The Law School

THE Law School of the University of Chicago is a member of the Association of American Law Schools and has a high standard of requirements for admission and graduation. It is essentially a graduate Law School, an academic degree being required of each candidate for the degree of J.D. (Juris Doctor), while the degree of LL.B. is to be conferred upon those who are not college graduates but have credits amounting to a required standing. The course of study pursued under the "Case System" is divided into three years of work. There is a prescribed course for the first year, while the student may have some choice in the arrangement of his work during the second and third years; but must at all times carry three majors of work, which means that he must have from twelve to fifteen hours of class work each week.

At present the Law School is occupying quarters in the Press Building, and although these quarters are occupied only temporarily, they provide ample facilities for the present needs. Eighteen thousand volumes have already been purchased for the Law Library. A new building is being erected for the exclusive use of the Law School, at a cost of two hundred and eighty thousand dollars. The plans provide for a gray stone building, after the English Gothic style, to be located in the main quadrangle of the University, and connected by covered passages with the main library of the University and with the building of the historical departments. The basement of the building will contain smoking and conversation rooms, toilet rooms and lockers. On the first floor there will be two large lecture rooms, capable of seating one hundred and fifty men each, and a number of smaller lecture rooms, class rooms, offices, etc. The library stack room will be on the second floor, with space for one hundred and twenty-five thousand volumes; and here also will be desks and work rooms for the professors, and rooms for the administration of the library. On the floor above will be a large reading hall, one hundred and eighty feet long by fifty feet wide, modeled after the great English Academic Halls, with timbered roof and clerestory windows. This room will furnish wall space for a large number of law books, and will be the general work and assembly room for the law students. On the same floor will be the office of the dean, also a large lecture room seating two hundred and fifty men.

The President's Visit

ON April 2, 1903, President Roosevelt visited the University of Chicago to receive the degree of L.L. D., which President Harper conferred upon him, and to lay the corner-stone of the new Law School Building. It was the most eventful day in the short history of the Law School, and signally emphasized the prosperity which that department of our University will enjoy in the future.

On President Roosevelt's arrival he was escorted by the convocation procession across the Campus, which was massed with students, who cheered him lustily until he passed into Kent Theatre. Here prayer was offered by the University Chaplain, Charles Richmond Henderson, D.D. A statement by President Harper was made at the conclusion of the prayer. The band then played the "Pleyel's Hymn," as it did on the occasion of President McKinley's receiving his degree from the University.

Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, Dean of the Faculties, made the convocation address. As an authority in political science, Professor Judson spoke on "Leadership in Democracy." He characterized President Roosevelt's leadership as ideal, and concluded by saying it was for that reason he presented President Roosevelt for the degree.

When the ceremony of conferring the degree had been concluded the procession reformed and moved to the site of the new Law School Building. From a staging erected for the speakers near the suspended corner-stone, President Harper read his statement, and Dr. Goodspeed announced the articles which would be placed within the stone. President Roosevelt then delivered a short address, and completed the exercises of the day by laying the stone which had been prepared for the touch of his trowel and maul.

The articles placed in the corner-stone are:

A Warning

*So bone, that when thy summons comes to fill
The little yellow books with knowledge,
In that mysterious realm where each shall search
His flunk note on the silent walls of Cobb,
Thou go not like some slavish dig at night,
Scourged to his text-books, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy doom
Like one who wraps the drapery of his cap and gown
About him and lies down to pleasant dreams.*

A Review of the Season

FOR the University of Chicago the football season of 1902 was second in glory only to that of 1899. In that year we had a championship team. The team of 1902 did not win that honor, but it was a team that gave a great deal of satisfaction to its coaches and supporters. When college opened in the fall it was little suspected what glory was in store for Chicago on the football field. With only six men of the previous year's team back, prospects did not look very bright. The men were: Captain Sheldon, Ellsworth, Lee Maxwell, Jennison, Perkins and Speik. Conrad returned a little later, but in a short time discontinued practice. This was all that was left of the team of 1901, an outlook rather unpromising. It seemed as if it were impossible for Chicago to keep men; as fast as they were developed by Director Stagg they would leave college. It looked as if Chicago would never get on her feet again after the past two disastrous seasons.

Our salvation lay in a very large squad of green but promising Freshmen. We began to feel there was some hope, and that with the material on hand Stagg would build up a team which the year following, or in two years would win the championship. Chicago men hardly dared to hope for success in 1902, the task of rounding into a team of so many new men seemed insurmountable. But as we watched day by day, week by week, everyone saw progress, and with the steady improvement our hopes and expectations rose proportionately.

Still the schedule loomed up in huge proportions. We felt that although our team would be a good one the schedule contained too many games. Knox, Purdue, Northwestern, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, looked like a series which would certainly trip up the strongest team, an insurmountable obstacle for our Freshman aggregation. Wisconsin and Michigan both had had championship teams during the previous year and had defeated us easily. Both had nearly all their men back and were sure to be stronger than before. At a distance they seemed impossible.

Yost, of Michigan, had said that the season would be a great one, as there were five great teams in the West; Michigan, Wisconsin, Northwestern, Illinois and Minnesota. We were not on the list, but four of these teams were on our schedule.

As the season advanced our prospects advanced also and we defeated all but one of our opponents, showing Yost, of Michigan, that despite his choice of the best teams in the West, we were still in the championship class.

Knox we managed to dispose of, 5 to 0. As Knox was a small college, critics put us down very low in the list. Then came the terrible game with Cornell College (Ia.) We won, but the poor exhibition of football shattered many of the aspirations of loyal Maroons. Those "on the inside" were not discouraged, and yet they could hardly keep down a feeling of fear for the following games in the schedule.

Purdue, it was said, had one of the best teams in its history, and fresh from a 40 to 0 victory over DePauw, came to Chicago, confident of winning. The Hoosier rooters were even betting that Chicago would not score. Our 33 to 0 victory was not only a surprise to them, but to us also. Joy spread throughout the Maroon camp and for the first time we dared to raise our heads and proclaim that we were in the championship race.

Northwestern was disposed of, 12 to 0, in spite of Sanford's coaching. Then came Illinois, confident of victory, and fell before our team of "coners" by a score of 6 to 0.

The Michigan game was the only disappointing contest of the season, not only because it was the only game we lost and because the score against us was large, but because we do not think that the score gives a fair comparison of the two teams. It is always disagreeable to make excuses, and we do not complain that we were not fairly beaten, but we were caught at a disadvantage. Mr. Stagg and nearly everyone else attributed the loss of the game to the injury to quarter back Lee Maxwell a few days before the game. This made it necessary for a man not accustomed to the position to play quarter back and to a certain extent the team was disorganized.

The season ended gloriously with our 11 to 0 victory against Wisconsin on Thanksgiving.

One pleasant feature of the season was that our "Little Captain" Jimmie Sheldon was able to play in every game. Several of the men were picked for positions on the all-western team, the most unanimous decisions coming to "Dad" Farr and "Shorty" Ellsworth.

A Review of the Season

THE Western inter-collegiate baseball season of 1902, as has often been the case when incomplete series of games have been scheduled, failed to bring out a team with a clear title to the championship. Chicago, by winning ten out of the eighteen inter-collegiate games played, established a legitimate right to third place in the West, even though Northwestern secured an even break in our series with them—each team winning two games. It is in point of other games won that we can make good our claim over the Evanston School.

Probably the most signal victories won by the team during the whole season were the two over Illinois. "Huffie's" Champaign aggregation, for two seasons previous to 1902, succeeded in taking every game played with the Maroons in baseball. So strenuous, however, were the efforts, and so good were the intentions of our last year's team, that at one stage of the season's record we stood in the lead for the Western championship (barring Wisconsin, whom we had not then played) and with a record of two victories to one defeat with Illinois. Unfortunately for us the two remaining games were scheduled at Champaign, with which town the team could not seemingly familiarize itself, and resulted in victories—for the "Illini." The latter team subsequently made a tour of the Eastern states, winning the games with Princeton and Yale, and only losing to Harvard by one run. The Illinois team certainly deserved, we believe, the title of "Western Champions."

A review of the contests of the season proves that Chicago was equal to the task of bringing home the scalps of many former victors. Michigan was defeated in the initial game on Marshall Field, 14 to 7. This defeat proved to be the forerunner of two others which the 'Varsity administered to the Maize and Blue. A fourth defeat for our worthy foes was probably prevented by the welcome sign (to them) of "wet grounds." The record of winning the entire Michigan series is one which has not been equaled by any former 'Varsity nine, that of the '97 team being three victories and one defeat against the Wolverines.

Northwestern, after losing the first game in the series to us, captured the second and third. The scores, 3-2 in the first, 2-4 and 0-1 in the second and third, indicate how bitterly the games were contested. The final game in the series was played on Marshall Field on Alumni Day, June 14, before a large assemblage of visitors attendant at the Decennial celebration. Chicago, by decisively winning the game, 11-2, tied the series, but we shall always feel that the last game more than "evened" the two defeats. We suffered unmitigated defeat only at the hands of Wisconsin. The Badgers unkindly took both games of the series from us by the narrowest of margins, 8 to 7 and 5 to 4. The Chicago-Illinois series brought out the largest crowds of the season. The games on our home grounds—two out of the five—were won by the 'Varsity, 6-5 and 3-2, the second victory being recorded only after ten innings of intensely exciting play. Erratic tendencies characterized the work of our men in the games scheduled at Champaign, while the Illini, cheered by its home crowd, showed championship form, and took the three games and the series by rather decisive scores. During the season Chicago crossed bats with Indiana, Purdue and Beloit in single games, and with Oberlin in two contests. Beloit, only, succeeded in defeating the Maroons in any one of these games, and Chicago seemed to have little trouble in humbling the lesser lights of the "Big Nine," a fact which caused much joy among us who had witnessed previous defeats by these "little" colleges. Mr. Stagg arranged no games with representatives other than of Western colleges, and no extensive trips were taken, but the schedule was a difficult one, and the efforts of the team were worthy of our sincerest appreciation.

A Pastoral

(By Malcolm Gervaise de St. Trevor)

*How pleasant it is when the sunset glow
Is gilding the west a harvest tone,
In a bark canoe with a hook or so,
To float alone.*

*But when the winter winds are high,
And cut you straight to the bloomin' bone,
And you owe for your board, then it's fierce to try
To float a loan.*

TRACK AND FIELD

A Review of the Season

THE track season of 1902 was very successful, and although we did not win the Conference meet at the end, we secured second place; Michigan, whom we had beaten two weeks before in a dual meet, being first.

During the indoor season we had four meets, in which we succeeded in bringing out an abundance of new material from the new freshman class. Blair, Quantrell, Speik, Friend, Cahill and Granberg being the most promising. On Feb. 1, we met the Chicago Y. M. C. A. in our gymnasium and defeated them by a score of 62 to 33, in spite of the fact that we divided the points of Friend, Granberg and Speik, who had been members of the Y. M. C. A. during the previous year.

The first of our two dual meets with Wisconsin on Feb. 15, resulted in a victory for Wisconsin. This meet was one of the most closely contested meets ever held in our gymnasium, and although the score shows Wisconsin winner by a comfortable margin, every event was hotly contested and four records were smashed. Senn and Blair tied the world's record in the 35 yard dash, Fred Moloney made a new world's record in the 40 yard hurdles, Magee broke the western indoor record for the pole-vault, Carpenter, of Wisconsin, broke the indoor record for the two-mile run, and Bredsteen, of Wisconsin, broke the gymnasium record in the mile run.

On March 1, a full team entered the Amateur Athletic Championships at Milwaukee and easily carried away first honors with 44 points, the team getting second place scoring but half as many.

The return Wisconsin meet held at Madison on March 15 resulted in another defeat for the Maroons, the score this time being $42\frac{1}{2}$ to $25\frac{1}{2}$.

Our first outdoor meet was on April 26, at Philadelphia. Only three men were entered in this meet, Capt. Moloney, Magee, and Blair. These three men were successful in getting one first, two seconds, and one third against the Easterners. In the 100 yard dash Blair and Moloney pushed Duffy of Georgetown to his limit and forced him to equal the world's record of $9\frac{3}{4}$ seconds to win the event. Moloney also took first in the 120 yard hurdles in the excellent time of $15\frac{3}{4}$ seconds, Magee secured second place in the pole-vault by clearing the bar at 11 ft. 5 in.

On May 3, the team held a dual meet with the University of Illinois on Illinois Field and defeated them by a score of 65 to 61. In this meet Magee vaulted 11 ft. 9 in., which broke all inter-collegiate records ever made in competition.

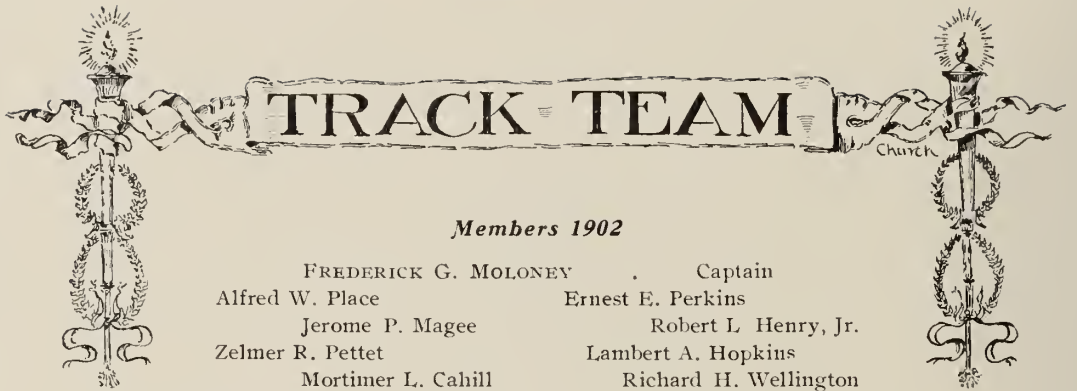

The next week our team won the dual meet with Northwestern at Evanston by a score of 77 to 35. In this meet Chicago won every track event, only allowing Northwestern to win events in the discus, hammer throw, high jump, and broad jump. The day was raw and no astonishing records were made.

On May 17, Chicago won one of the most hotly contested dual meets ever held in the west, by defeating the University of Michigan. Captain Moloney was easily the hero of the meet and captured four firsts, in three of them beating out inter-collegiate point winners. Speik also did good work by getting two firsts, in the discus and hammer throw. Friend won the broad jump by making the longest jump of the season, 22 ft. 8 in.

In the Conference College meet on May 31, we secured second place with 25 points. This was Fred Moloney's last appearance in inter-collegiate meets and he entered it with all of his determination of four years brought to a climax. After taking third place in the 100 yard dash and winning the 220 yard dash and 120 yard hurdles, he strained a tendon and was unable to compete in his other event the 220 yard hurdles, which he had won in the two previous inter-collegiates. But in spite of the fact that he was disabled, Captain Moloney scored more points than any other man in the meet and was awarded the individual championship medal.

The last meet of the year was held on Marshall Field with the University of California on June 7. Our team was handicapped by the absence of its captain, who was still suffering from the injury which he had sustained in the Conference meet, but in spite of this we secured eight out of a possible thirteen firsts.

THE season of 1902 was a very successful one for college tennis in the Middle-West. More contests between teams of the larger Universities took place than in any preceding year, and the general average ability shown by the players was higher than for many seasons past. From the standpoint of victories the year was not one of which Chicago can boast. The team, though stronger than that of 1901, was weaker than Chicago teams of preceding years, and succeeded in winning only one of the four dual inter-collegiate tournaments played. Throughout the season, however, the team improved in skill and knowledge of the game, and in the western inter-collegiate championship the last week of May, Proctor, by consistent playing, reached the final round in the singles, where he was defeated only after a hard fight by Danforth, of Michigan. Michigan won the championship in both singles and doubles, duplicating its record for 1901.

The season opened for Chicago in April, with the usual spring try-out for determining the personnel of the team. H. W. Belfield, Allen Frake and J. W. Bingham, of the team of 1901, retained their places. Charles Proctor, A. P. Nelson and Elbert Russel were the new men who obtained the right to represent Chicago in tennis contests with other colleges. Then followed a practice tournament with the Quadrangle Club, which the professors won handily. The first inter-collegiate match was with Wisconsin on the Quadrangle Club courts; Chicago won the doubles, Wisconsin the singles. Matches with Albion and Michigan and the Western Inter-collegiate followed. A dual match with Iowa also had been arranged to take place immediately after the inter-collegiate, but owing to lack of time on the part of the Iowa players the contest was called off by mutual consent after three matches had been played.

During the Summer Quarter the usual summer tournament was held under the direction of Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft. Hays, of the Divinity School, carried off the prize in singles, and Hays and Russell won the doubles.

At the opening of the Autumn Quarter in October, the annual tournament for the University Championship, which had been postponed from the preceding Spring Quarter on account of wet weather, was played. Charles Proctor won the singles, defeating Bingham in the finals 7-5, 6-1, 6-3. Moorehead and Bacon proved a surprise in the doubles, defeating Proctor and Bingham a hard five set match in the final round, by steady, consistent playing.

Tennis Team '02

HE devotees of Golf in the 'Varsity were exceedingly grateful last year in seeing the game at last raised to the "inter-collegiate" stage of match play. In former years desultory tournaments have been held, offering small inducements to our best players, in that they were usually handicap affairs which are unsatisfactory at best. Mr. Stagg, however, realizing the needs and also the aspirations of those interested in the game, "started the ball rolling" for a 'Varsity Golf Team by arranging two matches with the University of Michigan, one to be played at Ann Arbor during the fall quarter, the other at Chicago during the spring quarter. The interest raised by the scheduling of these matches was shown by the large field of entries in the preliminary tournament to pick the team. This was held on the links of the Homewood Country Club, which very graciously extended the courtesies of the Club to the University, October 16 and 17. The course is an ideal one and the scores made in the preliminaries were very fair. The team which was picked as a result of this preliminary play, to represent the University against Michigan, consisted of Fred Pettit, Ashley C. Dixon, Howard J. Sloan, Wayland Magee and Boeuf Pettit. Howard J. Sloan was elected captain of the team and on October 24 and 25 led the team against a picked five from the University of Michigan on the links of the Ann Arbor Country Club. The links were strange of course to our players, differing much in their layout to the home links, but without offering excuses we may say the team played well under the conditions and held itself even with Michigan on the second day after losing four down the first day of play. The return match with Michigan will be played on the Homewood links May 22 and 23, when we hope to regain the laurels lost at Ann Arbor.

THE year of 1902-03 has spelled success for the Cadet Corps. The forty men on the roster have taken up drill and manual with energy and precision. Colonel Brinkerhoff has given each week a lecture on a vital military subject, and a movement has been started towards giving credit for work done in the theory of tactics. Target practice has excited good natured competition for the handsome medals presented by Lieutenant De Sombre, former Captain of the Military Company. Lieutenant Wrightson, who succeeded Lieutenant De Sombre as Captain, has followed the example of his predecessor, and has entered the U. S. Army, being appointed a Lieutenant in the infantry.

JUNIOR COLLEGE BASKET BALL TEAM

Women's Athletics

HE athletic life of the women of the University has had many encouragements this year. Most important of these was the new field which was opened in May by five hundred enthusiastic girls and their friends, the occasion being the first Junior-Senior Basket Ball Contest. Then the women were given the new School of Education Gymnasium, which made the possibilities of training very good, and in the spring they moved into their own gymnasium in Lexington Hall, adjoining which is a small field.

Besides the usual Junior-Senior basketball contest for the cup, and baseball games, there was held a second winter indoor meet, where prizes were offered; class contest in hockey in the spring, and a golf tournament at the Auburn Park Golf Club in the fall. Systematic instruction in fencing, and rowing, and tennis was also included in the sports.

This year the annual basket ball banquet was enlarged into an athletic banquet, and one hundred basket ball, baseball and hockey enthusiasts were assembled.

*Low beneath the tree
Cherry buds dimple the stream.
Sweeter they to me
Than all the flowers of the tea,
Sweeter than life is its dream.*

*Hangs the moon at rest,
Heron fly darkly under;
Paused the old world's quest,
The air is still with wonder.
Knoweth the stream any rest?*

FACULTY
ALPHABET.

(SELECTIONS FROM)

A is for Allen, we all call him "Phil,"
We sit in his class and hear him "gespiel."
He growls and rumbles till out from the mass
We can hear a few nouns and German verbs pass,
And when we leave class we all say "Gee Whiz!
Was ein guter alt Deutscher unser Phil ist."

C is for Castle and also for Clark,
This last one named is at speaking a "shark."
He can make Daniel Webster and H. Clay look cheap
In fact, he could prob'ly teach "Prexie" to speak.

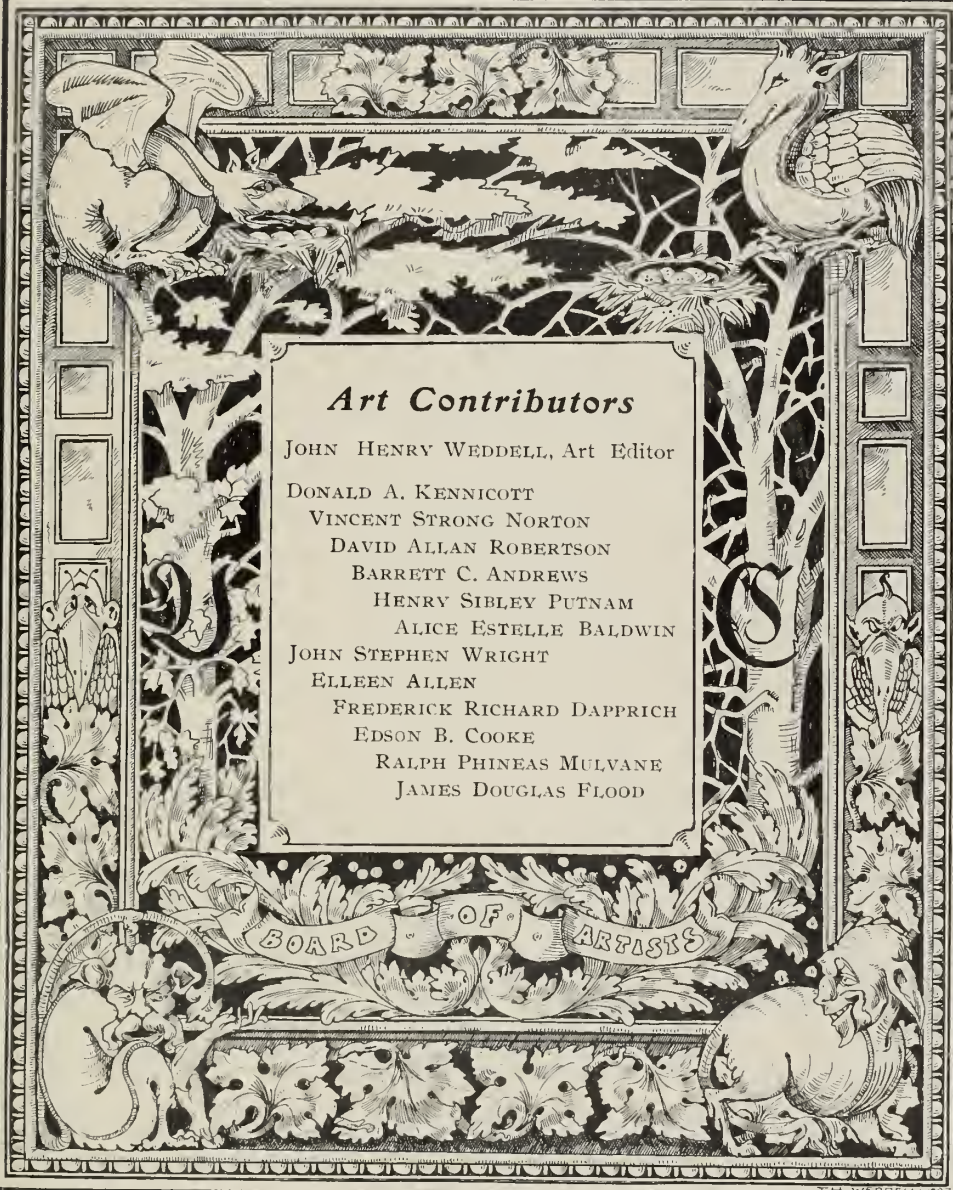

F is for Flint, he's hard as a "Nott"
When in English 3 we flounder about,
But he doesn't write books and whatever they say
We'll stick to N. Flint for we're glad he's that way.

G is for Goodspeed, a sterling old rooter,
Whom no one can beat as a varsity "hooter."
He cheers just as loud for the team in defeat
But he hates like the deuce to see us get beat.

H has to be for Harper of course,
And we think that perhaps he's been taking to "Force"
For the building we all hope soon to be in
Is the pile that we're going to call "Sunny Gym."

S is for Smith, for Stagg, and for Starr
Who's related to Indians near and afar.
But he's generous too, in the last extreme
For he furnished the varsity men with ice cream.

T is for Thompson, the history man
Who'll flunk with delight a whole class if he can.
So beware ye Freshmen, for if you would pass
Always wear collars, not sweaters to class.

Dramatis Personae

PREXIE YARPER	Head of the house of Capulet
GARGOYLETTE	Also of the house of Capulet, in love with Marooneo
MAROONEO	A member of the rival house of Montague
DENE WUNCENT	An evil spirit, in league with Yarper
DENE CHASSTLE	His assistants
DENE CZSCHMITH
DENE TOUGHS	The Queen of the good fairies, who endeavors to bring about the union of affinities
Students, Professors, Janitors, Fairies and Evil Spirits.

ACT I.

SCENE: A public place in front of Castle Cobb, the stronghold of the Capulets.
 Students are walking about.

OPENING CHORUS OF STUDENTS.

Merry, merry students we,
 Members of the Varsity;
 All our studies are a lunch,
 And we're a very joyous bunch
 At the glorious U. of C.

LADY STUDENT: This co-education certainly is the thing for my money. I never saw so many eligible and handsome men together at once before in all my life.

GENTLEMAN STUDENT: Hist! Someone cometh.

ANOTHER STUDENT: Aye, 'tis the gentle Marooneo with the lovely Lady Gargoylette. Let's hence.

FIRST STUDENT: Yes, let's all hence in a bunch.

(Exeunt Students. Enter Marooneo and Gargoylette.)

MAROONEO: What sorrow speakest thou? Is it so worse
 As this? Pray, love, but ope your lips to say
 This is a pipe.

MAROONEO (Not seeing the Denes): What is't? What see'st thou? (He sees Wuncent.)

Ha! Who art thou?

Art thou bird or beast or devil? Come speak!

Thou hast a tongue. If thou art Wuncent,

Tell a funny story. Anything, but gaze

Not at me so with glittering eye.

If I have flunked, why, out with it! Oh speak!

(Pause; no reply.)

What want ye here? Why tarry? Shall I provoke

Thee? Would'st thou scrap? Shall I then biff thee one

Upon the kisser, or bat thee in the lunch?

Or would'st thou don the mitts, here on the sward,

To spar a round or two?

(No answer. Enter Prexie.)

MAROONEO: What! Another!

PREXIE: Ha! ha! Thou'rt safely in my clutch at last;

Seize them, nor let them go till crack of doom.

MAROONEO: Ah, thou canst speak. Then tell me fiend most fell

In human form; tell me our fate.

PREXIE: Segregation!

MAROONEO: Say you not so. O spare us, or at least
Grant that we die not apart.

Hear me!

PREXIE: Nay, nay, me heart is steel. Take them away!

Let her be kept in Lexington and he Shall grace the darkest cell of Castle
Cobb.

(Gargoylette, weeping, is carried off at one side, and Marooneo, struggling, is taken out at the other.)

CURTAIN.

ACT II

SCENE: Exterior of Lexington Hall; moonlight.

—A meeting of the Fairies.

Fairy dance, at conclusion of which Dene Toughs, the queen of the fairies, enters. He carries a wand surmounted by a diamond (Barrios) star.

Song: (Air, "Michael Roy.")

DENE TOUGHS:

A mighty personage am I,
For I'm the Senior Dene;
My word is law to man and sprite
And I'm the Fairy queen;
And if you want to graduate
You'll have to make a call
On the Senior Dene in the dinky room
At thirteen Haskell Hall.

Chorus: For oh! For oh! Behold the fairy queen
If you're in woe just come to me
For I'm the Senior Dene.

(Ballet Dance.)

ALL: Hail to the fairy queen!

FIRST SPRITE: Thou guide of love's
Frail bark, we greet thee!

SECOND SPRITE: Joyous spirit,
We welcome thee!

DENE TOUGHS: I thank you gracious subjects.
What work is doing for tonight?
Pray put Me next!

FIRST SPRITE: We would save the lovers, Marooneo and Gargoylette, now segregated three months past.

DENE TOUGHS: Ah, they are in the power of the arch fiend
Dene Wuncent. I fear my sway will not avail.
Were they but in the Senior College, then—
But no—I can do naught—But wait, perchance—
I have a thought. Anon I will inform you
Of its purport. We must away.

(Fairies vanish.)

(Enter a youth forlornly picking out an air on a mandolin.)

MAROONEO: Ah, here could I sigh out my very soul
Beneath her window when the night is still.
(Gargoylette appears over wall.)

GARGOYLETTE (softly): Ah! Marooneo, wherefore art thou Marooneo?
A rose by any other name would smell as sweet.

MAROONEO: Ah! 'Tis the east and Gargoylette
is the sun;
Arise, fair sun, and make the moon appear
Like thirty cents.

GARGOYLETTE: How I have longed for thee.
MAROONEO: And I for thee. Alas can we no more
Behold our love's young dream.
(Dene Toughs appears as in a vision.)

DENE TOUGHS: Stand not aghast. I will thee good, my friends.
Would'st thou co-educate once more?
Trust me!

MAROONEO AND GARGOYLETTE: Aye aye, we would.

DENE TOUGHS: Then list most carefully.
(Produces bottle.)

Here is a potion which if you but take,
Will put you in a Rip Van Winkle
Lasting two long years and when you awake,
Your sorrows o'er, you'll find yourselves
Within the sacred pale of Senior College
Work. Will you partake?

MAROONEO AND GARGOYLETTE: We will. Anything.

MAROONEO: Give us the dope.
(Dene Toughs gives potion. They drink and fall asleep.)
(Curtain descends and the orchestra plays a lullaby.)

ACT III.

SCENE: Interior of Castle Cobb, showing the Junior rack and the clock which has stopped and is covered with cob-webs. Everything is dusty and looks as if it had not been disturbed for a long time. Motionless figures are sitting, standing or lying around the stairs, the floor, and everywhere. Among them are Marooneo and Gargoylette.

Chorus of Janitors is discovered.

(Chorus. Air: "Heidelberg Stein Song.")

Here's to a life that's bold and free,
Here's to the knight of the brooms,
Here's to the job that just suits me,
Sweeping the dirt from the rooms.
Never before could I raise the dust,
But now I have "Mun" for four;
I'll take it all and go on a bust;
Here's to the Janitor.

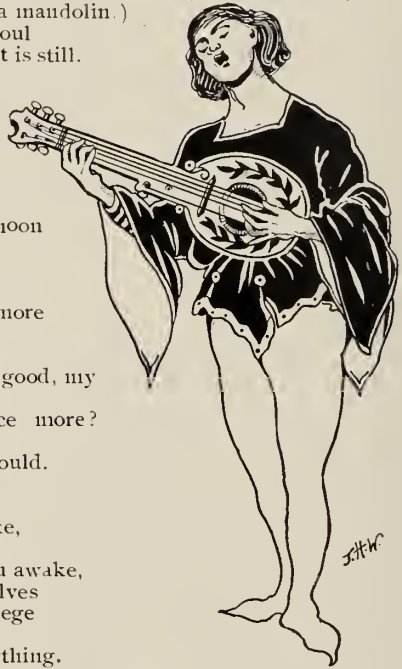

(Dance.)

FIRST JANITOR: For two long years, these weary wights have slept;
Nor breakfast nor eight-thirty class has woke
Them from their slumber deep.

(Enter Prexie wearing a scowl.)

PREXIE: Begone, scullions!

(Exeunt Janitors.)

PREXIE: The years are up, me time has come to foil Dene Toughs. His charges are forgotten quite
 And while he naps, once more they'll be my prey.
 (Stamps foot violently upon the floor.)
 Denes appear! I have work for thee!
 (Enter Denes Wuncent, Czschnith and Chasstle in a burst of flame.)

PREXIE (Pointing to Marooneo and Gargoylette): Make them awake;
 the hour has come; the time is ripe.

DENE WUNCENT (Touching Marooneo and Gargoylette on their shoulders): Awake!
 MAROONEO (Turning over): Gwan, I'll snooze yet another hour.
 I'll cut the blooming class this once for luck.
 (Marooneo sits up and begins to comprehend the situation.)
 Oh, I remember, I'm the Sleeping Beauty and the Beast. The prophecy is now
 Fulfilled. Wake, gentle Gargoylette.

PREXIE: But stay!
 You're in my power, not Toughs'; you must obey
 My rules and segregated be. You're mine!
 (Dene Toughs appears.)

DENE TOUGHS: They're mine!
 PREXIE: They're mine! Seize them!
 (Wuncent and his assistants start to lay hands on Marooneo and Gargoylette.)

DENE TOUGHS: Stand back, I say,
 'Till ye have heard my word. (To Marooneo and Gargoylette.) Take these, I pray,
 A charm against all evil spirits. (Hands each a title of Associate.)

MAROONEO AND GARGOYLETTE: We're saved!

PREXIE AND DENES: Foiled again!

GARGOYLETTE: Marooneo!
 MAROONEO: Gargoylette!
 (They fall into each other's arms as the recitation bell rings for chapel hour.)

“Brothers, it is long indeed
 Since our forms have graced a board;
 O'er our crypts full many a bead
 Has been told since we adored
 The Saints on Saints days—other times
 The women fair, O Lord!
 We were such jolly sinners then!
 Well, well, let's fleet the time
 Ere in our chancelled cots again
 We hear the matin chime.
 The priory's still a genial place,
 And we, friends, are the same,
 —Though somewhat thinner in the face—
 As when we took our name.
 Then brothers to a mouldered rout,
 And if your shapes be lean
 Let voice and manner be as stout
 As they have ever been.
 And, Brother Pius Pietas,
 Do you, the first, begin?”

(Brother Pius Pietas Speaks as chanting Holy Mass.)

“Though naked in my bones I sup,
 Bereft of cowl and gown,
 Brothers, my sockets still look up,
 My jewels still look down.”

(Brother Robin Scarlet-Eyes Speaks in lightly jesting wise.)

“Earthly toil and pain are o'er;
 We shall feel them both no more.
 As for Purgatory's fire—
 We know that can mount no higher
 Than the falt'ring soul of man
 Squirming on the frying-pan
 Of a hypocritic^d Pope.
 Thus we've cause for fear nor hope.
 Real pain flees when once we're dead;
 Shall we have champagne instead?
 —Do not rattle me I pray;
 I speak sober dry today.”

(The Abbot interposeth here
And bids prepare some blither cheer.)

“The hint is timely, brother mine.
Come, Bott’ler, to your task!
Though you have lost your stately line
You still can tap a cask.”

(The Bottler without mirth or passion Respondeth after his slow fashion.)

“True, I have lost the pompous curve
I gloried in of yore,
Yet still my spine, you may observe,
Leans backward as before.
Brothers, let each but hold his cup
And I shall gladly pour.”

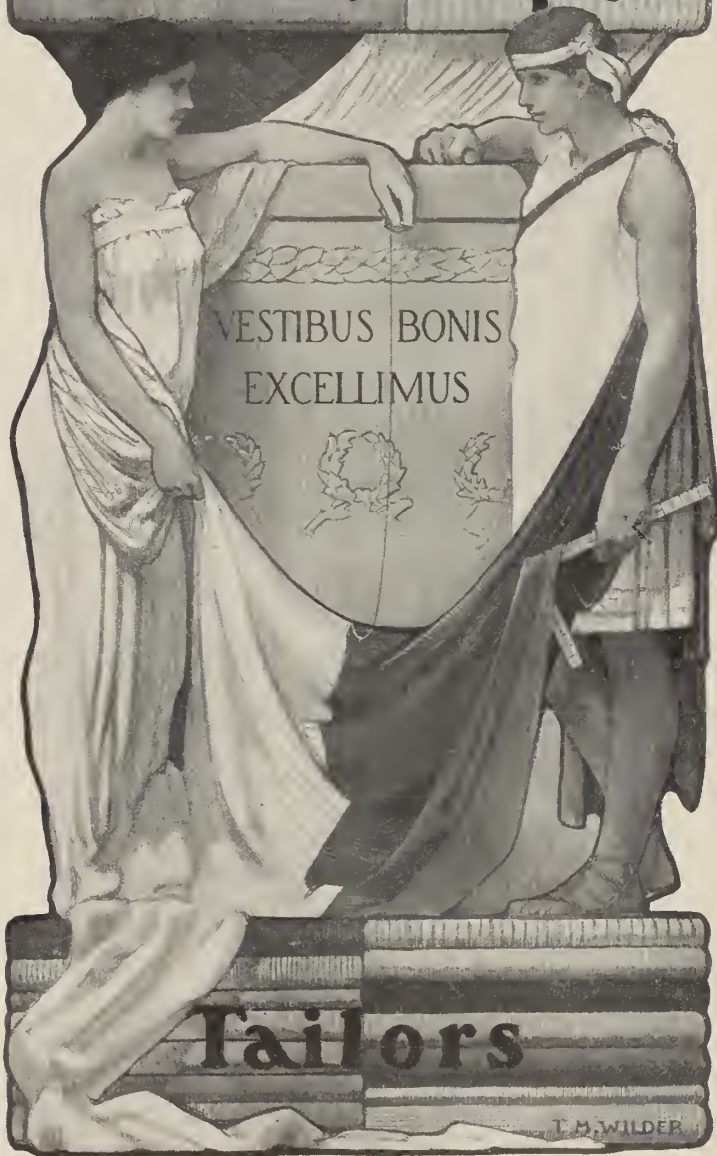

(Brother Robin Scarlet-Eyes
Tott’ring, cup in hand, doth rise.)

“Drink black death unto the Pope;
Death to Saints and death to hope;
But a health unto our bones
Mould’ring here beneath the stones
Happy were we, brothers dear,
Had we but —.”
“See here! See here!
Of your foibles cease to prate.
Your words are like your bones, I fear,
Somewhat inarticulate.
—Hark the matin bell ’gins ring;
We must hasten, brothers dear;
Each become a silent thing,
Each one in his proper grave.”

The Great Idea

THE first Foster Hall could not imagine why Miss Leigh cared to waste any of her time with such an insignificant man. She was a Senior; the recognized leader of one of the most exclusive clubs, and prominent in college society. What social value the friendship of a Sophomore, to whom the men referred with a superior intonation as a "barb" possessed, the gossips could not conceive. But, in spite of the fact that even her "club sisters" were talking about it disapprovingly, Miss Leigh kept her own counsel, for independence was one of her many virtues, and was as cordial toward him as ever.

She had never been a recognized social leader—she was too discriminating for that, but she was nevertheless a Power. All the strong men in college circles, leaders of the leading fraternities, athletic captains, men who made Iron Mask, and Owl and Serpent, were friends of hers, some even open admirers. But she was tired, just a trifle tired, of the commonplaces of her college world. She had no definite ambition to keep her from getting bored, and there was hardly a one of her masculine acquaintances who interested her. So when the Great Idea came, she hailed it with joy, and carried it through, as became a Power, to a successful climax.

She first noticed him in English 4, or, to speak more accurately, first noticed his eyes, for if it had not been for them it would never have happened. They were brown, a tender, romantic brown, with very long lashes, and in some way, she could never tell just how, they reminded her of her younger brother. The rest of him seemed to be ordinary enough—height, average; shoulders, narrow; clothes, slouchy. He was very unlike the kind of college fellow she knew—the clean-cut, confident, carefully groomed fraternity man. But because his eyes reminded her of the Little Brother, who was then in his Senior year in prep-school, she looked over in his direction oftener than she would have considered proper if he had been one of the other kind.

The instructor was reading themes that day and asking for criticism from the class. "What do you think of this, Mr. Drayton?" he asked, after a lurid bit of realism. The man with the eyes blushed, hesitated, and then stammered: "The author seems to take things rather seriously." She liked his voice; there were unrealized possibilities in it; she liked the remark; it seemed to indicate a sense of humor; she liked his name; it carried a connotation of good breeding.

But best of all, almost better than the eyes, she liked the smile which the next theme, a clever bit of comedy, brought to Drayton's lips. It showed a regular, comely set of teeth, and had a quiet sort of a charm. She afterwards tried to describe that smile in a daily theme, but after ransacking her brain for adjectives during half an hour, she gave up the attempt; she could not accomplish the impossible. There was something shy about it, and something frank; something winsome and something reserved; something humorous and something a bit sad.

The next day she passed him on the campus, and suffered a slight disillusion. He was plodding patiently to class; there was no spring to his step, no jauntiness in his carriage. His face was pale; he was dressed carelessly, and was rather unkempt. He spoke to no one; in fact, seemed to have no friends. His eyes were fixed on the sidewalk, his hands in his pockets, his shoulders stooped. There was an air of lonesomeness, a lack of self-assertion, a want of confidence, an appearance of inefficiency about him. But in spite of it all she could not forget the eyes and the smile.

Some weeks later the instructor distributed the day's papers about the room and asked for written comment, as a little lesson in the development of the critical faculty. Miss Leigh happened to get Drayton's and opened it with a little flurry of interest. It was a short piece of description, handled with a sure, practised touch. She wrote a flattering sentence across the back, and a few minutes later was asked to read the theme and her criticism. She obeyed with a very good will, and then glanced at Drayton to observe the effect. At the end of the hour she returned the theme to him, and said, on the impulse of the moment, "Mr. Drayton, I think this is the best thing that has been read this quarter." The remark elicited only an embarrassed, barely audible, "Thank you."

From that time on the affair had a gradual but steady development. From bows on the campus and in the class room, it progressed to short chats and the slop talk of a theme course. She was skillful enough to draw him out of his shell of reserve, and was rewarded by finding that his ideas about his favorite poets and novelists were mature and refreshing. He talked interestingly, and when his self-consciousness was completely shaken off, with flashes of insight that aroused her admiration. It made her quite cheerful to discover that the boy—he must have been two years younger than she—had some genuine stuff in him. She also felt a very natural satisfaction when she at last awoke to a realization of the fact that a lively admiration of her was developing in him.

Finally, when he plucked up audacity enough to ask if he might call, the Great Idea flashed upon her, and she, being as has been said before, a Power, at once set to work to realize it. Now all this happened in the fall quarter of his Sophomore, and of her Senior year. The means by which she worked the transformation will always be more or less conjecture. Perhaps it was largely sub-conscious suggestion; perhaps the resemblance to Little Brother made her bold enough to drop skillful hints; perhaps it was more due to his own subtlety than to any action on her part, perhaps it was all only a manifestation of that World-Force—the regenerating influence of the Feminine over the Masculine.

These things are hidden, but it is certain that Drayton began to emerge from the chrysalis stage and to take on butterfly wings with amazing swiftness.

The way in which he came into his own was a beautiful thing to see; and Miss Leigh had the delicious sensation of knowing that she was prime mover and sole spectator of a great event. He began to acquire confidence in himself; his voice took on the intonations of assurance and poise; he groomed himself into presentable shape; he squared his shoulders and walked with a fetching swing; he learned how to make an entrance into a room full of people without growing faint and tripping over his own feet; he took dancing lessons until he became proficient. It was a splendid burgeoning.

However hidden and esoteric may have been the forces behind the Great Idea, its consummation is historic. It came about in this fashion. One evening close to the end of the quarter, Dick Vanbrugh called on Miss Leigh, on a diplomatic mission. Dick was a leading spirit in the Zetas, a fraternity which Miss Leigh particularly affected. This was only natural in view of Miss Leigh's discrimination, for the Zetas were a patrician lot.

Being a diplomat, Dick did not come to the point at once. At last, after many conversational flourishes, he dropped his voice to a confidential stage whisper, as being the proper tone for one entrusted with a mission, and revealed the fact that there was a Freshman whom the Zetas wanted. Now usually whatever the Zetas wanted in the way of Freshmen, they got—this was a fact; Dick did not mention it, but any one who heard him could have made the inference. This Freshman, however, was a special case. He had an elder brother who was an alumnus of a chapter which pushed Zeta very hard. Perhaps this chance of relationship might have so prejudiced the Freshman that he could not see things in their proper relations, namely, that it was in accordance with the eternal fitness of things that he go Zeta. And, in short, would Miss Leigh, as a friend of Zeta, a personal friend of his, a friend of the Freshman, and as the most sensible and attractive girl in the varsity, use her influence?

This sort of a thing was not a novelty to Miss Leigh. She had helped the Zetas before, and they had even returned the compliment. So she merely said, "Well, Dick, I'll do what I can. But I've only met the boy once."

"We'll fix it so that he'll take you to the informal," said Dick with alacrity.

"And now, listen," she continued. "Do you know Mr. Drayton?"

* * * * *

The Freshman took Miss Leigh to the informal, and appeared a few days later wearing a Zeta pledge-button, much to the consternation of the Hated Rivals. And the next Friday night Vanbrugh happened to call on Miss Leigh, as also by a strange coincidence did Drayton, and wasn't Vanbrugh glad to see him, and how well he remembered him!

After that, strange and pleasant things happened to Drayton, which are also behind the Veil, and in the end he too became a Zeta. The morning after his initiation, Miss Leigh received a bunch of violets, tied with the Zeta colors, and some verses. She wanted to laugh at the boyishness of it, but she put the verses away carefully, and came down wearing the violets when Drayton called that night.

Thus was the Great Idea realized.

* * * * *

When for a lack of anything better to do—the next best thing was to accept Dick Vanbrugh, and that, she had decided, was impossible—Miss Leigh came back to college the next fall for graduate work, she found that her influence as a Power had vanished. Most of her best friends had left college, and "grads" are always out of the game anyway. She felt a little bit lost at first, but soon grew used to it and applied herself diligently to some very uninteresting research work.

Drayton in the meanwhile had become a bright and shining light. The latent talents, detected by Miss Leigh, had blossomed even beyond her hopes. The smile and the eyes and the sterling qualities beneath had made him a man to be held up as a model before Freshmen aspiring to win their spurs.

That winter the lack of a Senior candidate and some clever political manipulation by the Zetas secured for him the chairmanship of the Senior Prom. There were some who criticised his choice for a partner, Miss Leigh being only a "grad," a decadent Power. But there were others who, having an inkling of the Great Idea, thought it a most exemplary thing to do. Especially as it was well known that Drayton would have given his right hand to take a certain Freshman girl.

The "Prom" was given at Bournique's that year. As they began the grand march, he turned towards her with his winsome smile and said, with just a shade of tenderness in his voice, "If it hadn't been for you—"

It was her reward; she felt happier than she even confessed to herself.

But later the happiness burned out and turned to ashes. While she sat waiting her partner to claim her for the next dance, she noticed Drayton,—who had grown taller, and had acquired a poise of the head which made him well worth looking at, talking to the Freshman girl. He was looking at her very earnestly,—too earnestly, she thought, and there was a light in the brown eyes which had never been there when he talked to her.

So she turned away and tried very hard to remember how much his eyes reminded her of Little Brother.

And when Dick Vanbrugh took her for the next waltz, she did a very foolish thing. It was foolish of Dick too, but then it was the fifth or sixth time, and he was growing used to it.

WHILE the Professor of Mathematics was taking a walk in the country he sat down on the stump of a tree. All at once he saw approaching him a queer figure wearing a robe made of circles and triangles woven together like chain armor.

"I am Axiom One," said the creature.

"Ah! Then I know you already," said the Professor.

"Slightly, very slightly," snapped the Axiom. "Come with me and I will show you a few things."

They walked along for awhile, and then the Professor noticed in the distance a sort of high toboggan slide.

"What is that?" he inquired.

"That," said the Axiom, "is where the Trajectories of smooth particles of matter are sliding down smooth chords of conics."

"Oh! yes," cried the professor, "I wrote a thesis on them once. What do they really look like when they get through sliding?"

"Look like? What do you suppose you'd look like if you slid down smooth chords of conics? It isn't easy work, I tell you."

"It must be almost as hard as writing the thesis," remarked the Professor in a humbled tone.

"It's almost as hard as reading it," was the answer. "And you are a very presuming person to write of such things just as if you knew all about them. Why, I don't suppose you ever saw a Trajectory in your life, and yet you must come prying into things that are away outside of your knowledge. RUBBER-NECK!"

"SIR!!" cried the professor.

"Eh? O, I wasn't talking to you. It's that Variable trying to approach the Limit again. I stopped him just in time."

The Professor looked ahead and saw the Variable coming toward them. It was impossible to discover his size, for he was made entirely of india-rubber, and was never two minutes alike. This constant contortion gave his face a curiously mobile expression. At sight of the Professor the Variable writhed more than ever, and exclaimed with a sob :

"Did you see that? I got almost to the Limit that time, and then he had to yell at me and scare me again!"

He led the Professor to a path at the end of which stood the Limit, and a post painted like those in front of barber shops.

"Now you see," he continued, "I want to get to that Limit, but I can only go half the remaining distance at every run, and it's hard work, and then when I get almost there, one of those Axioms comes sneaking around and yells "Rubber-neck" at me, and I get rattled and have to begin all over again. You see it—it hurts my feelings to—to be called “Rubber-neck,” be-be-cause its—true!”

Here the Variable broke down and wept so bitterly that the Professor was quite unnerved.

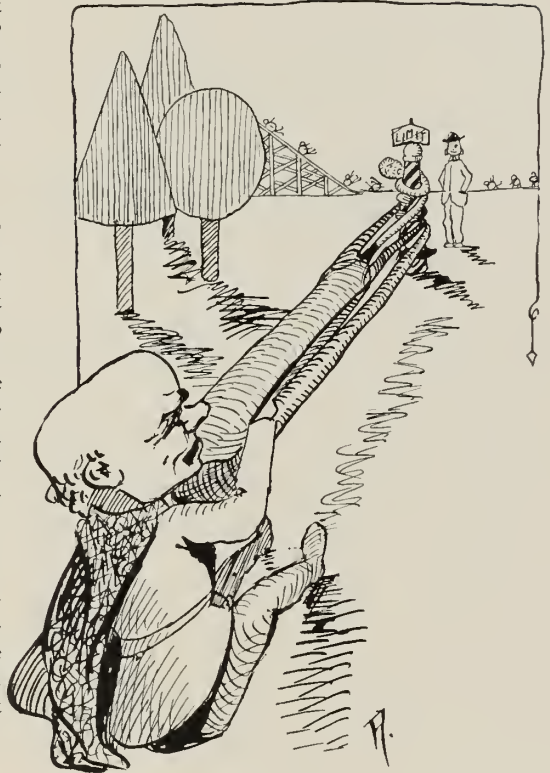

“But what do you want to get to the Limit for?” he inquired. “Aren’t you all right here?”

“I should think not!” cried the Variable, controlling his feelings with difficulty, “All the Fixed Quantities make fun of me and call me names; I want to get to the Limit and be a Fixed Quantity too.”

“I’ll fix you,” said the Axiom grimly.

“Just listen to me, whispered the Professor, who wanted to get the better of the Axiom. “Try it again, and when you get close up to the Limit jump for it instead of running a little at a time. Never mind if he does say things to you.”

The Variable squirmed all over with rapture and started for the path. He ran half the distance, then half the remaining distance, and then jumped at the Limit. But he had hardly touched it when the Axiom was upon him; and although the Variable held on to the Limit with his arms and legs the Axiom grabbed him around the waist and began to pull on him, while the Professor stood paralyzed with amazement. He soon understood everything however, for when the Axiom had stretched the Variable almost to the breaking point he uttered a laugh of fiendish triumph and snapped him at the Professor.

Rattlesnakes

WE toiled up the sandy road through the wild strangeness of the pine woods, following the devious windings of the wagon track. The birds fluttered noisily in the scanty underbrush, and started up with swift, unexpected "swishes" from among the masses of low palmetto leaves. The road was over-grown with grass in two broad lines down the middle where the infrequent wheels and feet of mules had left it untouched. The crickets chirped warily in the brown grass. We stumbled along heavily in the deep sand, glancing about at each bird sound, at each crack of a twig, and peering among the masses of close-set leaves in the hollows about us. Each moment we expected to look into the glittering eyes that we feared,—to hear the mysterious rattle, once heard, never to be forgotten. We neared a clump of half-grown palmettos. A curious noise came from beyond them. Could that be the dreaded sound? In itself it was not fearful. My nerves, on edge for an hour, could stand nothing more. I ran forward. A bent old white woman sat on a log lazily hulling pecans, pounding them with a dry stick, tap, tap, tap, on the log beside her. In my relief I laughed.

"Do you often see rattlesnakes about here?" I demanded bluntly.

She looked up at me slowly. Her colorless, wrinkled face smiled with difficulty as though unused to the exercise.

"O yessum," she answered. "But law, honey, you alls won't come on any 'thout warnin'. They allus rahr up un jah ther rattle, afore the' strike."

I laughed again, nervously.

"We thought your pounding was the rattle," I said.

She scarcely noticed me. She was already falling back into her apathy.

"The' do sound that way, some," she said.

The FOX Typewriter has Displaced

More Good Typewriters than Any Other Typewriter Made

It is the culmination of 25 years of typewriter building.

Examine the distinctive features of other typewriters and compare them with "The Fox" point for point. It has been just such comparisons as these that have resulted in the adoption of "The Fox" and the displacement of other machines.

Business men realize now as never before that they cannot afford to use antiquated methods or machines, the best is necessary to secure the best results, and "The Fox" is

The Good of the Old with the Best of the New

The Fox Typewriter could not have displaced these typewriters that have been on the market for years, did it not prove when put to the test to be superior in construction, capable of more and faster work and decidedly more durable.

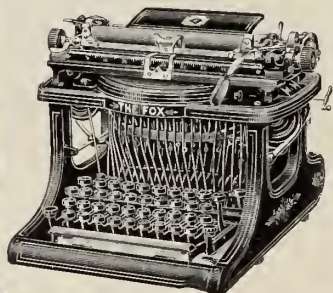

Any business man or firm in good standing no matter where situated, can make a practical test of the above statement by using a Fox Typewriter in their office for 10 days without incurring any obligation.

A proposition that is at least worthy of investigation.

A hint to us is all that is necessary.

In the Evening

THE train stands panting to be off again, a great moving city, teeming with people of the cities, throbbing with the impulse from the centers of the great world. The door of the little station is open to the soft, damp, Florida air. Inside, the firelight flickers on the rough wooden boxes and a backless wooden chair close in front of the logs, which lie glowing, flecked with little patches of shadow, white ash, and fluttering flames, in the great, blackened fireplace. In the shadow of the chimney corner sits a darkey, his head poised in a dreamy attitude, his body bent restfully over, one foot on the rung of the chair, the other beating time noiselessly to the low thrumming of the banjo in his hands. Gently the melody rises and falls, changes from gay to grave, still the soft monotonous throbbing of the banjo in its quaint, gentle melodies, still the half closed eyes, deep with the spell of the music, the rhythmic swaying of the body, and the steady quiet beating of the foot. Apart from the restless hurry of the world, knowing little and caring nothing for its passions, the man sits content in the warm, mellow, flickering darkness.

Serenade

(MOORISH)

The lilies are sweet in thy garden, lady,
The murmuring housetops are still.
A window looks down on thy garden, lady,
Cloud shadows cover the hill;
Ah, the lilies are sweet in thy garden, lady.
